BOY EMPEROR OF CHINA, REPORTED SPIRITED AWAY

Royal household is said to have secreted this annual head of the Manchu dynasty, Pu-Yi Huantung, to save him from assassination as the rebel armies advance.

20,000 REBELS MARCH ON PEKIN

PEKIN, Nov. 10.—The rebel army of 20,000 men under Gen. Chung pressed on toward Pekin to-day and the tottering Manchu throne drew nearer its fall. Gen. Tuan's division of 2,000 men left Pao-Ting 100 miles south of the capitol, at dawn.

The rebels proceeded northward along the Pekin railway, rapidly repairing bridges and tracks blown up by the Manchus. The Pao-Ting troops composed the third army division which mutinied against the Government. Citizen soldiers joined in the suspension on the capitol.

Panic reigns in the capital and, despite the statement of Prince Ching, former Premier, that an assault upon the city by rebels could not be realized, great quantities of provisions, ammunition and wagons are being carried into the Forbidden City, or the Manchu quarter. It was evident that if the rebels commenced slaughtering Manchus after their investment of Pekin, the Manchu families remaining loyal to the throne would stand siege in the Forbidden City and fight to their death.

Horrible Butchery at Foo Chow.

Thousands of Chinese fled from the city. The flight to Tien-Tsin has been diverted to Tu-Ku, a port city ten miles from Tien-Tsin, the report that General Chang's army will first take Tien-Tsin and operate from that city as a base. Tien-Tsin is only sixty miles from Pekin and is connected by an excellent railroad.

Terrible massacre is reported at Foo Chow, which was captured by the rebel sovereignty, according to the dispatches. 800 Manchus barricaded themselves when the city was taken and refused to surrender. The rebels shelled the buildings and the Manchus finally surrendered. The rebel officers were unable to control their men and all of the prisoners are said to have been butchered without mercy, women and children being horrible mutilated.

Ball cartridges were dealt out to the foreign guards about the legations at Tien Tsin to-day in expectancy of an immediate attack by the "Boxer" element. Extra guarding marines, with loaded rifles, guarded the legation buildings, which were crowded with refugees. Each flew its flag. The review of the Pao-Ting troops at Lu-Kou has been cut off by the flight of the imperialist troops who were guarding the Pekin-Kalgan railway.

Pirates swarm in Tien Tsin harbor and many steamships and other vessels have been captured or destroyed. Some of the pirate junks actually fly the flag of the insurgents.

Formal proclamation of the independence of Canton and Kwang-Tung province was made to-day by Chang Ming Chi, the Cantonese viceroy, who had just arrived at Hong Kong on a British warship. He says that he was authorized by the people and that their provincial assembly will act in both executive and legislative capacities. All relations with foreign powers will continue as they are, being conducted in the future from Canton instead of Pekin.

George Tsoti Chang of Amoy resigned to-day. All the other Manchu officials are fugitives. Rude organization is growing as the rebel sympathizers threaten to burn the city unless the Manchus are flushed, but extinguished before they spread.

Martial Law Throughout Empire.

China is virtually without government. Martial law reigns throughout the empire. All that vast section south of the Yang-Tse valley is isolated from the north and the authority of the throne has been absolutely nullified. Disruption of the entire empire is threatened, with a consequent reign of anarchy unless other powers step in and help to support the new regenerated government until it assumes stability. Warships are now stationed around all the foreign legations, to which scores of foreign residents have fled for protection. Several Manchu families took refuge in the foreign quarter and reported that the baby emperor had been carried from the city by the dowager empress.

Factional strife has broken out in the ranks of the revolutionists at Shanghai, and, while it is said that the more liberal party of the fruits of the rebellion against Manchu rule, it will defeat the aims of a large number of the anti-Manchu leaders.

MORSE TO AID PASTOR RICHESON

Former Senator William A. Morse, one of the leading criminal lawyers of the Massachusetts bar, has been retained as one of the array of counsel for the defence of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson on the charge of murdering Avis Linnell.

While Attorney Morse refused to affirm or deny the reports, it is known that during the past few days Philip B. Dunbar, who from the time of the arrest of the Rev. Mr. Richeson at the home of his fiancee's father, Moses Grant Edmonds of Brookline, has been active in behalf of the imprisoned pastor, visited the offices of Mr. Morse and had a long conference with him.

John L. Lee of Lynchburg, Va., as previously announced, will continue to fight for the freedom of the accused pastor. Now that the chief lawyers for the defence have been decided upon, it is expected that the work of preparing the defence for the Rev. Mr. Richeson will be speedily completed, as Philip B. Dunbar, and the private detective agency will have more opportunity to work and to follow up the many details that are constantly arising.

Seeking New Witness.

It became known to-day that the defence is seeking a new woman witness, who is said to have facts bearing on the character of Avis Linnell, and that important new testimony is expected at the arraignment of the minister next Monday.

The character witness is being sought as the result of a clew furnished by a detective. She lives in a small town outside the State. Search also is being made for a young woman student of music, whose name has been mentioned in the same connection. The latter has also been invited to work on a new tack. It is understood that the man who gave the information is coming to Boston to confer with the defence.

Trace Candy Clew.

A small glass canister containing several peppermints sticks is a new bit of evidence which the police have secured in the murder mystery. There is great secrecy at police headquarters regarding this bit of evidence, but it has leaked out that through this candy jar the police hope to prove that the minister and the young woman were together on the afternoon that Avis Linnell took the deadly drought of poison from which she died.

This jar of candy was in Avis Linnell's hands when she returned to the Young Women's Christian Association building on Warrenton street, where she boarded, and she held it up to her girl friends when she called to say good by to them, taunts "Oh, I have been out to dinner with my gentleman friend." The girl was very happy and in a joyous sort of way held up the glass jar as proof that she had been out with "her friend," this being taken by her girl friends to mean the Rev. Mr. Richeson.

The candy was distributed among her girl friends, and Miss Linnell nibbled the confection and chatted merrily before going to the bathroom where her body was found a short time afterwards.

In making daily search of Miss Linnell's room, the police discovered the small candy jar and took it to the police station square headquarters. The canister is one of the kind that are to be found in the drug and confectionery stores.

Tracing the Candy Jar.

Though the police have not convinced that the Cambridge pastor dined with Miss Linnell on the Saturday afternoon a few hours before the girl died, they encountered much difficulty in trying to prove this to be a fact. The police have gone from another clew, and inspectors having in their possession pennies which the prosecution says the dead girl are making the rounds of the stores where similar candy is sold.

The police believe that if they can discover the person who sold the canister it will help them to fix down another very important link in their chain of circumstantial evidence. Because of this, they are electing themselves to locate the clerk who may have sold the jar of peppermint candy.

CHARGES MAN LED HUSBAND TO LEAVE

MRS. Elizabeth Geromini of Franklin, names Louis Brunelle of Millis as the defendant in a $5,000 alienation of affections suit which has been set for Dedham. In the declaration Mrs. Geromini says she was married to Petro Geromini September 4, 1904. Two children were born to them. On June 5, last, however, she says her husband, who was the two children, returned to Italy, but says the defendant persuaded him to desert her and abetted in the desertion and in the taking of the two children.

MRS. JULIA DUFF, WHO RUNS AGAIN FOR SCHOOL BOARD

MRS. DUFF TO RUN ONCE MORE

Mrs. Julia Duff of Charlestown will try for the school committee again.

Her husband, Dr. John Duff, wearing his familiar slouch felt fedora, appeared at the election booth to-day and took out nomination papers for his wife as a candidate for the school board.

Two years ago the school board was reduced in membership from twenty-four to five. Mrs. Duff has endeavored to become one of the quintet. She has been unsuccessful, although she was one of the most aggressive members of the old board.

Dr. John A. Coulbourn, endorsed last night by the Citizens Municipal League for the City Council, took out papers to-day to be nominated for the school committee. Councillors Kenny and Ballantyne, the other Citizens' League nominees, have already taken out papers.

Recount papers were taken out by Tilden S. Bell, an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Representatives in Ward 20, and there will also be a recount of the votes cast in the Eighth Suffolk Senatorial district, where Robert P. Clarkson, the Democratic candidate, was defeated by 106 votes.

Mrs. FitzGerald Endorsed.

"It is high time the Mandyn dynasty was overthrown in the School Committee and women represented on it by one of their number," said Mrs. Susan Y. FitzGerald to-day.

Mrs. Fitzgerald had been informed of the indorsement of her candidacy for the School Committee by the School Voters' League. She also had been told that it was probable her candidacy would be indorsed by the Democrats.

"The whole people should be represented on the School Board," said Mrs. Fitzgerald. "It is not only the people who have children in the schools whose interests are at stake in the education of the next generation. It is every citizen of the community whose affairs are tied up in the education that the children of to-day are being given. This is going to be a good, hard fight and I am glad to be in it."

Senk 5,000 Names.

Mrs. Fitzgerald is a leading Suffragist and her candidacy is likely to be enthusiastically aided by advocates of the ballot for women. Members of the School Voters' League, which retused to indorse the candidacies of Joseph Lee and George E. Brock for re-election to the School Board at the request of the Municipal League and the Public School Association, to-day began a canvass to obtain the 5,000 names necessary for Mrs. Fitzgerald's nomination. They expect no difficulty in obtaining them.

At a slightly attended meeting in Wesleyan Hall, the Citizens' Municipal League indorsed City Councillors Thomas J. Kenny, Walter Ballantyne, and John A. Coulbourne, for the City Council, and George E. Brock and Joseph Lee for the School Board.

The Public School Association voted to indorse School Committeemen Brock and Lee. The Democratic leaders have come to no definite conclusion on candidates for the School Board, but the Ward 20 ticket will be settled in a couple of days.

SHIRLEY ROBBERS SCARED FROM SAFE

SHIRLEY, Nov. 10.—Burglars robbed the railroad station here of $2 from a guns machine and telephone box and had started on work on the safe when frightened away. No tickets were taken. Entrance was gained by cutting a pane of glass.

ANNOUNCE OWNERS OF RED SOX

The names of the new shareholders in the Boston American League Baseball Club, to whom a half interest in the club was sold by President John I. Taylor and Mr. Taylor, General Charles H. Taylor, were given out to-day.

Jake Stahl, one of the new stockholders, will manage the Red Sox and play first base. This is official.

The other new stockholders with Stahl are:

C. H. Randle, a Chicago capitalist.

H. M. Malson of the South Side National Bank of Chicago.

Robert B. McRoy, present secretary of the Boston Baseball League and representing Ban Johnson.

James H. McAleer, present manager of the Washington club.

Wide Interest in McRoy.

The news that Robert B. McRoy was to be one of the new stockholders was first told by the AMERICAN two months ago. The announcement created wide interest, particularly on account of the establishment of McRoy being necessary to Ban Johnson, president of the American League.

The AMERICAN also announced at the time that Jake Stahl would be manager of the club and would help cut down the club's big batting average. This announcement was denied at the time by the Taylors, who took a line of non-committal denials.

The news that Stahl will manage the Red Sox next season as well as play first base, will delight the Boston fans. Stahl signed a contract with "Jimmy" McAleer last year providing that if the Red Sox' interests, Frank Ingle Jr. a constituent of the syndicate in the manager's contract. Stahl should become a stockholder.

The Red Sox deal has been in Boston control since the Taylors bought it in 1902 from John Kilfoyle of Milwaukee. He sold the entire stock for a figure reported at that time to be $150,000. The Taylors then sold a half-interest to the four new stockholders for about $75,000.

Under Stahl's experienced hand much is hoped for the Red Sox during the coming season. Stahl is shown in public backwards, forwards and across. He came to Boston from Washington shortly after the retirement for the Red Sox. He did not go into the game immediately, however, as the Red Sox had two star catchers in Criger and Carrigan. He played in but a couple of games, and was a member of the Washington team for a couple of years. Stahl was one of the leading hitters of the league.

Won Fame as Hitter.

Stahl was later traded to Washington. There he was developed into a first baseman and one of the leading hitters of the league.

As a member of the Washington team Stahl had his first swing at management. He made a fairly good showing, considering the poor material with which he had to work. At one time during the middle of last season he had the Senators well up in the race, but injury from Walter Johnson and Joke was traded to the New York Highlanders. He played in the outfield. Before the end of the season he was traded to the Red Sox and played the first base where he made a big hit.

The deal by which Jake Stahl quit the Red Sox, sacking his private business and playing baseball for a living, was a revelation, since that his wife was against his going into baseball. He was offered a position as speaker in the bank of his father-in-law, Judge Baldwin.

John I. Taylor and Percy Donovan, manager, Stahl made a special trip to Chicago last Winter and again this Spring, to get Stahl into baseball. The proposition that Jake declined was a handsome one.

Two years ago, however, when it was first announced that reorganization was in sight, Stahl was mentioned as manager.

Officials in Conference.

Robert B. McRoy, treasurer; John I. Taylor, vice-president, and H. M. Randle, a director of the board of directors of the Boston American League baseball team for the season of 1912, held an informal meeting at the Hotel Touraine to-day.

Messrs. McRoy, Randle and Taylor refused to talk for print, but what was done at the meeting. When seen by a representative of the AMERICAN they were busily engaged in studying the plans of the baseball park, which were spread out on a large table.

Mr. Kenny, however, did say that everything possible would be done this season to give Boston a winning team. "Nothing of the sort with a whimper. We would like to make a winning baseball team," was the comment of one of the directors present as sinners. Mr. Randle was also of the same opinion.

Stahl's father-in-law, H. M. Malson, president of the South Side National Bank of Chicago is a stockholder.

Messrs. McRoy and Randle expect to leave Boston to-night or early to-morrow morning for Chicago. The first of the new men, however, will find McRoy still in Boston. Along with him will come Mrs. McRoy and the rest of the club and possibly Stahl.

It is said that McAleer intend to become permanent residents of this city and Mr. McAleer is looking forward to the time that he will be a citizen of Boston, which he thinks is the greatest ball town in the country.

Girl in the Freeman Case

ALICE MUNROE

Miss Alice F. Munroe, who lived in Dorchester, is said by the police to have been arrested in Toronto with Richard L. Freeman, a former Boston broker, on account of a $50 hotel bill. She and Freeman were brought back to this city by Special Officer Burke of police headquarters. She is not under arrest.

INJUNCTION ON HORSE LIFTED

The injunction has been removed from "Dummy," the horse, by Judge Hardy in the equity session of the Suffolk Superior Court.

Davis Chait of the West End had the injunction placed on "Dummy," and it stayed there until Hyman Weiner of the same locality came into court to-day and had the court remove it.

Chait and Weiner became partners in the grocery business at 21½ Chambers street last March. They quarrelled, and as a result the business is now being liquidated.

Chait asserted that Weiner quit "Dummy" into the business as his share. He further said that "Dummy" was a part of the assets of the copartnership, and became into court and obtained a temporary injunction restraining Weiner from disposing of the animal. Chait maintained that he was entitled to a portion of the proceeds from the sale of "Dummy." Weiner thought differently.

Judge Hardy thought it would be a good idea to have a receiver appointed to wind up the affairs of the partnership and the receiver decide whether "Dummy" was a part of the business, but he said that he would not do this unless the complainant put up $50 or $100 to insure payment of the receiver for his work. The court finally decided to let the case go on and will hear it on its merits later.

FREEMAN CASE UP TO-MORROW

Richard L. Freeman, the former Boston broker who at one time spent $30,000 in a year in taxicabs, dowers and entertainment, will be arraigned to-morrow in the Superior Court before Judge Sanderson on an indictment charging him with larceny. The Suffolk County grand jury, which found an indictment against him, will report at the same time.

Miss Alice F. Munroe, the Dorchester girl who left Boston when he disappeared and was at Toronto in his company when he was arrested by Boston officers, may be the principal witness in his defence. She is now at her home in Dorchester, while Freeman is lodged in a cell at the Charles street jail.

Freeman is charged by the police with having fled from this city on last August 20 a few days before an indictment was returned against him by the Grand Jury on the charge of the larceny of $10,500 from Miss Susan M. Donnell of Amesbury, almost a centenarian.

Freeman's disappearance was coincident with that of Miss Munroe. Set beside the district here and Miss Munroe was known as "Mrs. Hill." Freeman left a wife and two children who also lived in Dorchester.

Caught in Toronto.

Nothing was heard of Freeman until last Saturday, when he and the girl were arrested in Toronto on the complaint of the management of the Prince George Hotel, where they had been staying for a week. The bill was for $50 for food, lodging and entertainment. They were arrested by Detectives Archibald and Tifton and obtained New York as their home. Letters sent by the girl to her relatives in Gloucester and other cities asking for aid are said to show that Miss Munroe had not been with Freeman all the time since he fled from Boston. Deputy Watts was commandeered with and he sent Special Officer Burke to Toronto, where he interviewed Freeman and the latter admitted his identity and willingness to return and stand trial.

The Toronto authorities solved all claims to him for the hotel charge, and as there was no charge against Miss Munroe, Burke said her fare to Boston. During a greater part of the trip she held a whispered conversation with Freeman, while

GETS TEN YEARS FOR POISON ATTEMPT

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 10.—Carl Oman of Barrington, charged with attempting wholesale poisoning, was sentenced to eight to ten years in the State Prison at Concord. Oman, it was alleged, supplied the family of John Randall at Deerfield with enough poison to kill a regiment. One of the Randalls discovered its presence in some water before any had drank of it.

PRINCE'S NURSERY IS A BATTLEFIELD

ROME, Nov. 10.—While little Italian boys and girls are playing at soldiers in the streets, Prince Humbert, the eight-year-old heir to the Italian throne, is devoting his time to much military manoeuvring. He discusses strategic plans with his father, and is never happier than when allowed to read the papers. Prince Humbert has transformed his nursery into a battlefield, the floor being covered with fallen Turks.

FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE Cures colds and coughs. Builds you up.

ITALIANS WIN GREAT VICTORY

ROME, Nov. 10.—Official dispatches from Tripoli to-day stated that the Italian troops won a decisive victory over the combined Arabs and Turks to-day, and regained the wells which supply the city with water. The Italians made a sortie from the city at two different points and surprised the enemy, who lost heavily.

Following the Italian sortie the Turks made an attack on the Italian forces at Gargaresch and suffered another defeat. The Turks attacked the Italian fort with artillery, but were driven off, leaving ten guns and a number of rifles behind in their flight.

The Italians discovered to-day that in the military hospital there were twenty Turkish officers. The Italian surgeons thought they found nothing wrong with their health and believe they were spies. A number of small arms and much ammunition was found secreted near the hospital.

Defence of Italy's policy in Tripoli was received here in a signed statement from General Caneva, Italian Commander-in-chief in Tripoli, to-day. It follows:

"If any reproach can be brought against us, it can only be that we erred on the side of too much consideration and indulgence toward the natives. Our soldiers . . . were instructed and strictly ordered to treat the Arabs on the friendliest of terms, to respect their principles, customs, religion and women. The Arabs were informed that if we would not export the grains each, the rifles taken from the transport Derna by Turks and distributed among them. Two thousand were thus bought and sold for——

"Hundreds of native laborers were employed and paid to help in the evacuation of the Italian army. These were always treated with the greatest regard to certain chiefs after we discovered them. They were permitted to pass through our lines unmolested.

Women Fired on Italians.

"In many instances attacks by natives were of the most treacherous kind. Arabs with rifles hidden under their clothes walked close to our lines and fired on Italian soldiers. Even women, concealed behind fences, fired on the Italians. Members of the ambulance corps, attaches of Red Cross and even Red Cross ambulances, were treacherously fired upon and a number were injured or slaughtered. Women and men among the natives urged the Italians to attack the Arabs. Italians were ordered to keep indoors, for our soldiers were under orders to defend themselves in the event of a massacre.

"We were obliged finally to adopt stringent and severe measures and put them in force in the city of Tripoli. This was followed by almost every man that fired against us, although unarmed ammunition we arrested as prisoners of war."

Aerial Fleet for Turks.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The immense dirigible done to the Turkish troops in Tripoli by the aeronautical corps of the Italian army has determined Turkey to form an aerial corps, and to-day the Turkish government offered Gustave Hamel, holder of the world's speed record, $50,000 to organize the fleet. It is the intention of the Turkish government to purchase warships against the Italian warships as well as against the army.

PHONOGRAPH IN DEATH TRIAL

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 10.—The stenographer will be succeeded by the phonograph to record the evidence taken at the trial of Herman O. Spencer for murder. The trial is expected to open early next week and a system of phonographs and sounding boards already has been installed in the Superior Court room by direction of Attorney-General James M. Swift, who will have charge of the prosecution in connection with District Attorney Christopher T. Callahan of Holyoke.

Three experts from the office of the Attorney-General are to operate the phonographs. As fast as each cylinder is filled it will be taken to another room and set in motion, the words spoken in the court room to be transcribed by expert stenographers for the court records.

Spencer will be tried for the murder of Miss Martha B. Hutchinson during an attempt to rob the home of Miss Lucy Dow, with whom she was stopping. Posing as a respectable young man, Spencer also is alleged to have committed a series of burglaries and other crimes in Springfield that baffled the police for months. Judge John C. Crosby is to preside at the trial.

HIGGINSON FUR COAT A MYSTERY

A magnificent sealskin coat, purchased on the customs records say, by Mrs. A. Henry Higginson, and seized for non-payment of duty by special treasury agents here on information furnished from Washington, is to be sold at public auction at the appraiser's store on Nov. 28.

That, in brief, is the history of the coat since it came into the possession of the government. The seizure was made on June 27, and efforts have since been made by the government officials to collect the duty from Mr. Higginson. He, however, the customs officials say, has claimed that the garment was not worth what it would cost with duty and penalty added, and has refused to pay.

Mystery surrounds the seizure and sale, so far as the customs men are concerned. They point out that it is only a simple matter of disagreement between the treasury department and the consignee as to the value of the goods. Then they declare that the "penalty" due the government in the foreign price of the coat, plus the duty, which is 50 per cent. of the value.

Seized on Arrival From Canada.

The garment, which is said to be a remarkably beautiful one, costing several hundred dollars, was seized on the arrival here on a train from Canada. Action was directly wholly from the supervisors' division of the treasury department at Washington.

The first intimation received by the special Treasury agents in Boston that there was anything in connection with regarding the coat was when they were instructed to go and take the garment. Washington, it is believed at the Federal building, acted on information furnished by inspectors on the Maine border, presumably at Vanceboro, Me., but the latter, the local men admit, is really a guess, although they say that it is highly convincet.

Collector Curtis's first knowledge of the seizure was a day or two later, when it was called to his attention that Mrs. Higginson from the sub-treasury.

A. Henry Higginson, son of Henry L. Higginson, to-day denied that the coat was the property of his wife. He claimed that the whole episode was the result either of a trick on the part of someone or of a confusion of names.

Was Miss Caldwell, Actress.

Mrs. Higginson before her marriage to the son of the millionaire banker was Miss Jeane Caldwell, an actress. The announcement of her engagement some years ago created a sensation here, in New York and in Newport. Since that time she has been prominent at all the horse shows and similar society sports events, where her gowns and her personality both served to make her prominent.

The sealskin sack is only one of a large number of articles to be sold at the appraiser's store on the same date, all of them seized at one time or another during the last few months.

These for the most part consist of cigars and cigarettes and, in addition, toilet lots, generally running from 50 to 100 smokers' articles and there a quart to a gallon or so of liquor. The reason why so many addresses of this kind appear is explained by the statement that previously travellers were allowed to bring in small quantities of such things for their own use or for gifts to friends. Recently the treasury department, as a result of smuggling revelations at New York, decided that the law was to be enforced literally.

did not reach the ears of the inspector. Inasmuch as she assured him that he could find her at any time he might want to see her, the inspector let Miss Monroe to leave the train ahead of himself and his prisoner.

Found Life Hard.

Miss Monroe is said to have gone to the home of her brother in Gloucester. She had written him a pitiful letter after her money had given out, telling of hardships and hunger, and appealing for aid. The girl said she had eaten nothing for three days and intimated the dashing broker, for whom she had sacrificed everything, was likely to abandon her.

Miss Munroe was born in Gloucester nineteen years ago, where her father was in the fishing business. Her father died some years ago and her mother married a second time. She came to Boston with her mother when she was twelve years old and had since resided in Dorchester. They first lived at No. 55 Lonsdale street, where they remained five years.

She attended the Mary Hemenway School, but did not graduate. She was obliged to go to work and for some time was employed in Boston department stores. She later worked at Mrs. Hastings's variety store at the corner of Lonsdale and Adams streets, and when Mrs. Hastings moved to King square she continued the girl in her employ.

Later the Lonsdale street the Jamieson family lived at No. 80; the Lawrence family at No. 126 Cushing avenue. Then they moved to No. 86 Stoughton street.

Miss Munroe is tall and of beautiful figure. She is a brunette and always dressed in the height of style. She was introduced to Freeman about three years ago by a Miss Louise Hardy who resides on St. Botolph street and who was an intimate friend of Miss Munroe.

Freeman is twenty-seven years old and was born and passed most of his life at No. 25 Austin street, Milton. He was married to Miss Lena Nesbitt, who lived on Atherton street, Milton, about five years ago. There are two little girls, one two and a half and one six months old.

Freeman's mother works in a Boston department store. He was brought up by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Freeman, who now live on Austin street. When he was married his grandparents gave him the house at No. 25 Austin street, which he soon lost by placing heavy mortgages upon it. Freeman attended the grammar schools in Milton and went to the Milton High School for a year or so.

The police say other charges than that brought by Mrs. Donnell will be lodged against Freeman.

'SMOKE POKER' IS OFF AT HARVARD

"Smoke poker" disappeared to-day from Harvard student life. Those college men who bet the price of a box of cigarettes on the poker hand that was enclosed in the favor packages of cigarettes that they purchased at the "smoke shop" of Leavitt & Pierce, Harvard square, have now ceased to stop the practice, for the Waigh and Ward Society has obtained judgment against the firm and to-day no "smoke poker" packs could be bought for any price.

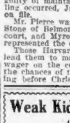
Through the complaint of J. Frank Chase of the Waigh and Ward Society, William W. Pierce, treasurer of Leavitt & Pierce, was given a private hearing in the office of Judge Almy of the Cambridge District Court to-day and after being found guilty of maintaining a place where gambling occurred, Judge Almy placed the case on file.

Mr. Pierce was represented by Arthur P. Stone of Belmont, associate justice of the court, and Myron B. Johnson of Waltham represented the complainant.

Those Harvard men whose proclivities lead them to make bets will now have to wager on the condition of the weather or the chances of the Cambridge team opening before Christmas.

Weak Kidneys Weaken the Whole Body

No chain is stronger than its weakest link. No man is stronger than his kidneys. Overwork, colds, strains, etc., weaken the kidneys and the whole body suffers. Don't neglect the slightest kidney ailment. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. They are especially for sick kidneys. Endorsed by Boston people.



John A. Newman, 7 School Place, Cambridge, Mass., says: "My kidneys were in bad shape and I realized that unless I found relief the complaint would soon get the better of me. There was a dull, grinding pain in the small of my back and it was only with difficulty that I could straighten after stooping. The kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage and I did not sleep well. I doctored faithfully, but the physicians seemed unable to help me. Through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills my health was restored and my kidneys became normal."

Remember the name—Doan's.

FOSS AND FITZ TO ATTEND BALL

Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald are invited as guests at the annual ball of the Irish Outing Club in Roughan Hall, Charlestown, to-night. There will be a concert. The club has 150 members, and the dance committee is David J. Mead, Daniel J. Collins, Joseph McHugh, James McAuliffe and Edward McDonald.

CARUSO TO HAVE MUSIC A-PLENTY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—A big moving van halted in front of the Hotel Knickerbocker. There were three large pianos in it. These were hoisted to the ninth floor, where Enrico Caruso has his suite. The tenor superintended the placing of the pianos. One he had placed in his parlor, the second in a room which he uses exclusively for singing.

JAIL MORMON AFTER CONVERTS

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—M. Thompson and Varion Keller were arrested when they tried to force entry into the home of Mrs. E. D. Delaney. They testified 200 Mormon missionaries were at work in the United States, eighteen of whom were in Chicago. "We received orders to force our way into homes to get converts, if necessary," said Thompson.

KAISER MAY PUT HIS SON IN JAIL

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—All Berlin expected to-day the arrest of the Crown Prince and his brother, Prince Augustus William, by order of the Kaiser.

Crown Prince William has set himself as the head of the German jingo party. The Kaiser was reported to be furious at the actions of the two princes and other members of the royal family during the debate in the Reichstag when the Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, defended his course in the Moroccan dispute with France.

Prince William and his brother made themselves conspicuous during the debate. They sneered at Von Bethmann-Hollweg at every opportunity from their seats in the front of the royal box. Crown Princess Cecilie was with her husband, attracting additional attention by the huge black and red umbrella hat she wore.

Opponents of the government, especially in the seats of the Centrists or Catholic party and the Socialists, kept their eyes on the royal box and smiled approvingly at the openly expressed disapproval of the two princes and the crown princess to the explanations of the chancellor.

All Germany Surprised.

Surprise was expressed on all sides at the daring of the Crown Prince in ranging himself so openly in opposition to his father, whose rule in the family is as stern and in many instances tyrannical as any of the old Hohenzollerns of the middle ages.

On all sides of the chamber it was said that the Kaiser was likely to resent the open hostility toward Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg as aimed at himself.

Apparently the two princes were unmoved by any fear. When the Chancellor in his addresses referred to Dr. Lindquist, who resigned as Colonial Secretary rather than defend the Moroccan agreement before the Reichstag, the Crown Prince clapped his hands and slapped his royal brother on the back.

The Chancellor could not help noticing this action, but kept on speaking. His remarks, however, were lost in the buzz of whispers that followed the daring action of the Prince William, which was even more plainly than if he had uttered it, "Dr. Lindquist did just right."

Disagrees With Chancellor.

The Crown Prince kept shaking his head every time Bethmann-Hollweg urged that his course had been dictated by a regard for the real interests of Germany.

But the most daring exploit of Prince William, in the minds of most of the members, was his negative shake of the head when the Chancellor declared that all through the negotiations the Kaiser had stood back of him and had insisted on strict adherence to the program as mapped out by the Chancellor. Not so many years ago this action would have been regarded as lese majesty, especially when committed by the heir-apparent or any member of the imperial family.

The Crown Prince shook his head again vigorously when the Chancellor declared that the crisis with France had reached such an acute stage that its peaceful settlement is worth more than all the discussions about disarmament and arbitration.

Believes Empire Weakened.

When Bethmann-Hollweg concluded, the Crown Prince looked about the chamber with his lip curled and disapproval of the Chancellor's remarks written on every line of his features. But his face lit up and he applauded vigorously the declaration of Baron von Hertling, leader of the Centrists, that "Germany's peaceableness is regarded abroad as weakness."

When Herr von Heidebrand, a Conservative, declared, "My party is ready to make any sacrifice that Germany may defend her honor with the sword," the Crown Prince seized his brother's hand and shook it again and again.

JAILED HUSBAND'S PAY GOES TO WIFE

NORTHAMPTON, Nov. 10.—William Wright of Williamsburg was sentenced to hard labor in the House of Correction for one year for non-support of his wife and three children. Sheriff Fitzgerald was ordered by the court to pay Wright's family fifty cents a day while he is in jail at the expense of the county. Wright will be put at work bottoming chairs. Three years ago Wright deserted his family.

RUEF PAROLE URGED BY MANY

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—The movement for a parole for Abraham Ruef, formerly political leader, started by Fremont Older, the editor who instituted and fought for the graft prosecution which resulted in the conviction of Ruef for bribery, has taken national proportions.

Messages of support have been received by Older from Interstate Commerce Commissioner Franklin K. Lane, an oldtime political enemy of Ruef, and Brand Whitlock, Mayor of Toledo. Ruef's sentence of fourteen years began early in March. Petitions for parole cannot be entertained under the law until one year has been served.

TO EXHUME 6 IN VERMILYA CASE

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Although they confronted her with a report that arsenic had been found in the bodies of Richard T. Smith and Frank Brinkamp the police to-day failed to break through the stolid reserve of Mrs. Vermilya, under arrest for the murder of policeman Arthur Bisonette. They failed in their attempt to draw from her any incriminating admissions.

Smith was a boarder at Mrs. Vermilya's home and Brinkamp was her son by her first marriage. Both died from peculiar stomach ailments similar to the effect of poisoning which killed Bisonette.

Coroner Hoffman returned to Chicago to-day with the viscera of Charles Vermilya, the woman's second husband, and will have it examined immediately for traces of poison. The coroner also announced that the bodies of six other persons, who died under peculiar circumstances after associating with Mrs. Vermilya, will be disinterred.

The police began a new search for victims at the Vermilya home who became ill after dining there. They have already found six such persons, and at least two of these, the police say, remember using white pepper from the shaker which, it is believed, carried death to Bisonette and many others.

NAMES SPIRITS IN DIVORCE SUIT

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—Adolph Schnell has filed suit for divorce from Lillian Trump Schnell, a trance medium, who remains in Kansas City while he has come home to his mother.

Schnell seems very jealous of four spirits who, he says, have been on most familiar terms with his wife; Mike Conroy, whom he calls her "chief guide," and three Indians—Red Wing, his son, Red Feather, and High Horse.

Schnell says, feelingly, the spirits have a bad habit of visiting his wife at night, and he objects strongly to their attentions to her and to the attentions she pays them and to the attentions she compels him to pay them. He swears he cannot be happy with her while the spirits are around; he cannot sleep even; so, being ready to relinquish her to Mike Conroy, High Horse and the others, he asks for a divorce.

"I would get into my feet sleep when my wife would begin to yell," said Schnell, as if rehearsing his complaint in the suit. "When I'd ask her what was the matter she would say, 'Mike Conroy is here. He wants you to get up and talk to your grandfather.' When Mike Conroy possesses her she talked with a brogue."

GIRL STUDENTS 'SHINE' FOR FUND

"Receipts from polishing shoes, $6." This item in the report of Treasurer Dorothy W. Ridgway of the $100,000 Undergraduate Fund Committee is the one most commented upon by the Wellesley students who are engaged in helping to raise the money for the building of the new clubhouse on the campus.

Other Wellesley girls have been collecting old bottles, discarded newspapers, cast-off clothing and resorting to other novel means to swelling the building fund, but the girls who "shined" the shoes of their classmates are regarded as the real heroines of the fund.

At five cents a "shine" it was necessary for them to polish up 120 pairs of shoes to obtain the $6. The shoe polishing industry is still active at Wellesley and the "shiners" are just as enthusiastic in the cause. They expect to swell the "shine" account on the contribution list to $25 or perhaps more before the lists are closed.

The report shows that by other novel methods girls in College Hall have added $20.50 to the fund, those in Stone Hall $3.35 and seniors have contributed $6 that they have raised in various ways. The student fund now amounts to $28,467.55.

As many organizations of Wellesley graduates throughout the country are also raising money toward the students' building fund it is believed here that ground for the new building can be broken within a year or two. The students' building will be to Wellesley what the Union is to Harvard.

OPEN DAILY TILL 6:30—SATURDAYS 10:30

We are making up for a late start by offering

Boston's Greatest Clothes Values NOW

BEING forced as all Boston knows, to occupy for over a month an out-of-the-way, temporary location until our present beautiful new store was ready for occupancy, we suffered a heavy loss of Fall business. We are practically only starting the season now, nearly two months late.

Two things we must do: Lessen our tremendously heavy stocks, and make up for loss of business by increased activity now. So we have revised prices throughout our entire store and the revision is unmistakably downward, to a point far below actual value. Present range begins at $12—think of it—and goes up to the most luxurious garments imaginable at $40, including Sack, Walking, Prince Albert, Dress and Tuxedo Suits, medium and heavy weight Overcoats, Raincoats, Fur and Fur-lined Coats, etc., etc.

All GEORGES MODEL CLOTHES, embracing the newest thoughts in English and American Fashions, a full season ahead of readymades. Try to match our exclusive Royal Purple, Blue-Gray or Chestnut-Brown at any Readymade store. See whether they can duplicate our Smart English soft roll Sack or London Raglan Coats.

While the values at every price in the range are considerably unusual, the wondrous variety and high quality of our Suits and Overcoats at $12 and $15 are cause for very special comment. They equal in appearance and service anything you can buy elsewhere at $20 to $25. Just investigate and satisfy yourself.

$12.50 and $15

SERVISS DESCRIBES FIRST FROST ON MARS

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Nov. 10.—The first Autumn frost over night has appeared in the Martian Antarctic regions. It was first observed at the Lowell Observatory on November 3. The report from the observatory says:

"It was seen as a bright mist on the planet's sunrise edge and only there, not continuing on the planet turned. It is evident this bright seen was frost from the fact that it gradually dissipated as it was brought into sunlight by the planet's daily rotation. This is the first time this particular phenomenon has been observed."

Arrow points to the supposed location of frost and snow on the planet Mars, which has been discovered at the Flagstaff, Arizona, observatory of Professor Lowell of Boston.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

The news from the Flagstaff Observatory that "frost" has begun to appear around the Antarctic Circle of the planet Mars is a bit of extra-terrestrial weather reporting which may be as correct as some that is done at home.

On Mars it is now the latter half of what we on earth would call August, the Summer is fast breaking up, and Autumn is at hand. There is such a remarkable similarity between the succession of the seasons on Mars and on the earth that it seems perfectly reasonable to assume, as the Flagstaff observers do, that the white cap deposit which their instruments revealed during the last few days, hovering like a morning mist along the dividing line between day and night on Mars, is a real snowfall, a token of the coming chill of Winter and an indication of the beginning of the south polar snow cap which, a few months later, will bury the whole Antarctic circle of that planet.

If this assumption is correct the supposed inhabitants of Mars must now be hurrying to get their harvests in in preparation for the long, dry Winter, when nearly all the water of the southern hemisphere of this planet will be locked up, for more than one of our years, in the polar icefields.

It is the first time that an occurrence of this kind has actually been witnessed on Mars although similar scenes must have been enacted there for untold thousands of generations.

The position of the bright white bands that have been photographed is such as to accord with the probable location of the first snows, since it is within a belt included between 62 and 65 degrees of south latitude, which would embrace the polar circle of the planet.

Near the centre of that circle the sun still remains perpetually above the horizon, so that the deposits of snow probably begins in a ring about the Antartic region and gradually advances toward the pole as the sun declines.

The behavior of the phenomenon with regard to sunrise also accords with the supposition that is a really light snow or frost which is seen, for as the morning sun gets higher upon it it gradually disappears, as if melted away. Thus all the appearances are in favor of the hypothesis that has been mentioned.

Puzzling Difficulties.

And yet there are puzzling difficulties in the way which makes these curious observations of fascinating interest. We know that the force of gravitation in Mars is only about two-fifths of that on the earth, and we infer that, as a consequence, Mars cannot permanently hold upon its surface such gases as those which constitute the bulk of the earth's atmosphere.

The question thus rises: What is the nature of this frost, or this white, snow-like deposit, on Mars? Does it resemble our snow, or is it something of a different composition? It has the color, or the lack of color, characteristic of snow, and, as imitates snow in being dissipated by the sun's rays, and yet dynamical considerations lead us to think that it cannot be frozen water vapor because vapor, owing to the speed of vibration of its molecules, ought to fly off from that planet and escape into space.

On the other hand it is very difficult to guess what substance there could be which would so closely resemble snow. The suggestion has been made that is is frozen carbonic air but hypothesis is hardly satisfactory. But whatever it may be there can be no doubt of the existence of something which behaves after the manner of snow.

What Martians Think.

If these phenomena, which have not been noticed continually since November 3, continue to be visible, and if the Antarctic circle of Mars is seen to become gradually covered with white as the Winter advances it may be necessary to reconstruct prevailing ideas about the relation between the force of gravity on a planet and the existence of a permanent atmosphere upon it, and then we shall have to explain. If we can, how a little world like Mars may be furnished with air and water, or some substance for air and water, suitable to the needs of the beings dwelling upon it.

Perhaps the Martians, to show there is no mystery in what seems so mysterious to us, would hold their sides with laughter if they were told how astonished we are as our telescopes increase in power to find their planet first nerobis in going through so many earthlike performances in spite of its very unearthlike dimensions.

PRINCESS DENIED MOTHER BY LAW

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Judge Master of the Tribunal of the Seine, handed down the extraordinary decision that the little Franco-American Princess, Jasmonde Estelle Alexander de Broglie, has no mother legally. This decision is equivalent to saying that Estelle Alexander, the music hall singer, of California and former Princess Robert de Broglie, is not the mother of her own child. Thus the Princess Jasmonde, now seven years old, has a father, but no mother in the eyes of the French law.

The decision annuls the ex-Princess de Broglie's recognition of her own child and is granted at the request of her former husband. Prince de Broglie recognized the baby as his on July 2, 1904, eight days after her birth and before a divorce was granted Estelle Alexander from Sydney B. Peil, her first husband. This recognition still holds good.

Child Remains a Princess.

Little Jasmonde, although legally deprived of her mother, remains a Princess of the great house of De Broglie.

Estelle Alexander, incensed at the decision, declared nature's law was higher than the Code of Napoleon and engaged a lawyer, Charles Philippe, to take the case to a higher court.

She threatened to horsewhip all the De Broglies in France if her maternity of her own child was not admitted. The former Princess Estelle is now Madame Maritza, wife of a music hall singer of Rome.

Prince Robert de Broglie had just been divorced from his first wife when he married Miss Alexander. The first Princess Robert was the Baroness des Landes, whom herself had just been divorced when she eloped with the Prince. They lived together only a few months.

Disinherited, Turns to Vaudeville.

Then Prince Robert met the beautiful singer, fled to Chicago and married her. When the news reached France, Prince Robert was disinherited. He and his wife went into vaudeville and toured the United States, she singing and he conducting the orchestra. They added to their act by putting their child in a stage box each night and training her to call "Mamma" when the Princess appeared.

Finally the couple went back to Paris, and Prince Robert's father began annulment proceedings on the ground that the marriage had been celebrated in America, and had not complied with the French law. The annulment action failed, however, and the Princess sued for divorce, which was granted in May, 1909.

In February, 1910, the Prince announced that he intended to marry Mme. Melodia, wife of a Paris artist, as soon as she obtained a divorce. The Prince at that time had dropped his title and was known as "M. Stellis." It was under that name that he was arrested and fined because of his friendship with the artist's wife.

NO CHORUS GIRL CAN AFFORD TO WED A MILLIONAIRE'S SON.

"Papa has grown too wise," says Miss Sun Young, who is having a lot trouble just now because she married Papa's money.

MISSIONARY BOARD ELECTS BOSTONIANS

NORWICH, Ct., Nov. 10.—The Woman's Board of Missions of the Congregational Church has elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Charles H. Daniels, Newtonville, Mass.; corresponding secretaries, Mrs. John O. Means and Mrs. A. A. Strong of Auburndale, Mass.; recording secretary, Miss J. F. Hill, Cambridge, Mass.; home secretary, Miss Alice B. Harris Stanwood, Boston; foreign secretary, Miss Kate G. Lamson, Boston.

Indigestion—Dyspepsia

are two of the most common and most troublesome ailments of modern life, and are the cause of much ill health. To keep your stomach in a healthy and strong condition and to get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, take as directed.

It is a form of food already digested, and when taken just before a meal stimulates the mucous surfaces and little gland of the stomach to a healthy action, causing a sufficient flow of the gastric juice to digest the food and it promotes perfect assimilation. It also excites the flow of the bile, digestion and starchy food, preventing fermentation in the stomach and bowels.

If these diseases or other stomach troubles have already taken hold, Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey will quickly restore the diseased to their natural healthy condition.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine and is recognized as such by the world. It is sold by druggists and grocers and dealers in sealed bottles, price $1.00. If you can't get it, write us. We will tell you how you can get it. Write for free medicinal booklet and book of recipes for table and cooking use.

Misses and Girls—We Offer YOU
Smarter Style
Larger Variety
Lower Price
Better Quality
IN COATS
Than You Can Get Elsewhere

Last Saturday we were unable to wait on the great crowds that preferred our coats. Tomorrow we will be prepared with more saleswomen and better service, as we expect the largest business of the season.

Here's another lot of those splendid $20.00, $22.50 and $25.00 Misses' Coats at $14.98 that crowded this section so that all could not be served last Saturday. Tomorrow we'll be ready for the greatest outpouring of the younger generation ever known to buy coats. Every well dressed young lady recognizes at once that our styles are the very acme of smartness, while their mothers appreciate the saving of $6.00 to $10.00 on a coat, in addition to admiring the superb styles and excellent quality. In this great and complete collection there are:

Semi-Tailored Coats	Scotch Mixtures	50-Inch Coats	$14.98
Reversible Coats	Imported Materials	52-Inch Coats
Semi-Reversible Coats	Reversible Cloths	Sizes 14, 16, 18

Girls' Full Length Coats $4.98

To emphatically demonstrate the superiority of our styles, qualities and values, we offer these beautiful coats at a price in some instances almost less than half the actual value. It explains why the crowds are coming here for coats. They are made of fine kersey, cheviot, caracul and plush. Every one of the season's most approved styles, in all the wanted colors. Beautiful wide braid trimmings, tassels and pretty sailor collar are some of the effects used in trimming these coats. In fact, every style that has been approved this season will be represented in this lot. Sizes 6 to 14 years.

AND NOW COMES ABBAS EFFENDI

Abbas Effendi will be in Boston early in December.

"Who's he?"

He's one of the "Babs." Babism or half a century has secretly converted one-third of the population of Persia, has established itself in Syria, and may get soon a footing in Boston after you have seen Abbas Effendi.

You will know him as he walks around the streets of Boston by his long white beard and moustache beautifully combed. The Babas are experts in caring for the beards. They are expected to spend at least one hour a day in combing and trimming their beards. No man can be a leader in that sect unless he knows how to do this feat.

He has a fine forehead, a delicate aquiline nose, mild, sad eyes and an expression of patient saintly serenity.

His close white turban and olive green silk abba will set the pace for a new garment among the women. Society people in England have been charmed by the appearance of this man.

His father lived in exile for a number of years, confined in a fortress, when he was released by the English, who took possession of Cyrus in 1878.

For not agreeing with the common acceptation of the Mahommedan belief he was put in this fortress. He was not entirely orthodox. The old Mahommedan wanted to get rid of him. His son is a Bab. The word means a gate, and he believes that something new is being told him every day. Babism is the gate to something and progressive to belief.

Over in the country, where he has such a large following, he has heard that Boston is very progressive in its teaching.

Progress is the first note of Babism. Abbas Effendi will create an impression in this city no doubt. He has another name which may be used extensively here in America, during his travels. It is Abdul Baha. This means that he is the head of Babism.

He has a soft, sweet, mellow voice and speaks sometimes a little above a whisper. As he speaks, he keeps his eyes fixed on a given point in the room to appear as if he is in severe contemplation.

Something new is coming to him daily. He expects to get away with new impressions of life from his stay in Boston. Lectures will be given three times a week and he will tell what the quiet peoples life is and why we need not think too much upon what has happened, but must keep busy in receiving the messages of progress from the present.

A Common Skin Trouble.

Eczema is the most annoying and most common of all skin diseases. One-third of all skin troubles are eczema in one of its various forms. The best known treatment is the new remedy, Cadum. It is soothing and antiseptic, stops the terrible itching of eczema at once and begins healing with the first application. Cadum can be used with confidence in skin and scalp troubles of adults and infants, and has proved a blessing to thousands who have suffered for years from tormenting and disfiguring skin diseases. Cadum is antiseptic, prevents infection from disease germs, and should be in every home for prompt use in skin troubles. Of druggists, 10c. & 25c. per box.

REDMOND GLAD BALFOUR GOES

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Commenting on the resignation of A. J. Balfour from the leadership of his party in the House of Commons, John Redmond, leader of the Irish parliamentary party, said to-day:

"The resignation of Balfour gives the Nationalists a great advantage in the Home Rule fight, as fighting against any prospective leader will be nothing compared with a fight against an old parliamentary hand like Balfour."

OLIVE WHITE ENDS TRIAL DIVORCE FROM HUSBAND

Olive Celeste Moore White, the opera singer, otherwise known as the "Lady who couldn't stand for Cincinnati," has made up with her rich husband, Archibald S. White, the New York and Cincinnati banker.

After giving a "separation dinner" at the Plaza, New York, last May, and then living apart by mutual consent, the two are now reunited in New York, according to despatches from that city today.

The news is of particular interest to Boston people, for Mrs. White made her debut on the opera stage in Boston in 1902 in the "Bostonians." She scored a triumph in the role of Alan-a-Dale.

Mrs. White gained fame for voice, her beauty and her engaging personality ever since she launched herself into the limelight of the stage. When she married Archibald S. White, a wealthy widower, six years ago, more publicity came to her.

But all the newspaper notices Mrs. White had previously received were as nothing compared with the attention she attracted when she sat as hostess at her famous "separation dinner" and cast her fondness aspersions upon Cincinnati.

Couldn't Stand Cincinnati.

Thirty guests attended the dinner, Mr. White was present, as well as his wife. It was known that Mrs. White was to roll aboard the next day. But it was not known, till Mrs. White calmly announced it to the assembled company, that the separation was intended to be permanent. Mrs. White explained thus:

"Mr. White insists on living in Cincinnati. I cannot stand Cincinnati. It is so inartistic, so void of atmosphere. I cannot live there. As Mr. White will not reside elsewhere, all there is for me to do is to leave him."

These few kind words were duly printed in all the morning newspapers the next day and in a few minutes the nation was made aware of a loud and raucous howl emanating from the city of Cincinnati.

Citizens of that abused municipality raised their voices in one tremendous chatter. Dr. Louis Schwab, Mayor of Cincinnati, jumped into print with defence of the Queen City. He regretted that Mrs. Moore should criticize Cincinnati so unkindly. He cited the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Art Academy, Art Museum, Rookwood Pottery, Eden Park and other artistic "atmospheric" possessions of his constituency. He allowed that Cincinnati doesn't possess the "Bohemianism" of, Paris, but insisted that Cincinnati was all right nevertheless.

Congressman "Nick" Longworth wired from Washington the sweeping assertion that Cincinnati "is the centre of all that is truly artistic in the country."

The Cincinnati people felt like Hans Wagner in "The Prince of Pilsen" when Europeans didn't know what Cincinnati meant. Their feelings were hurt so keenly that they didn't simmer down for months.

Husband Follows to Europe.

Leaving Cincinnati to plaster its own bruised pride, Mrs. White sailed for Europe, where she remained for months the whites ensued. But they did not materialize.

Late in the Summer Mr. White went abroad. It was given out that his purpose was to open a Paris branch of his banking house.

Last week Mrs. White quietly returned to New York and took apartments at the St. Regis. The next development was the appearance of Mr. White at the St. Regis. Now New York has awakened to the fact that the two are reunited and apparently as companionable as ever.

To-day Mrs. White was asked flatly if she and Mr. White were thoroughly reconciled. She smiled sweetly and replied:

"Well, we are here all right and are occupying a suite at the hotel. That ought to be answer enough."

"Is the reconciliation to be permanent?"

"Now, really, I am awfully tired. I've been shopping and I'm all worn out. I can't discuss domestic affairs any more at present," said Mrs. White.

Friends of the couple figure that the differences in Paris and patched up their differences. The question which remains to be answered, however, is: "How about Cincinnati?" Mr. White has heavy business interests in New York. It is thought that may be the establish his home here and give up Cincinnati rather than give up his pretty wife.

Mrs. White was formerly Miss Olive Celeste Moore, daughter of Judge Elwyn S. Moore of Red Cloud, Minn. After two years on the opera stage she met Mr. White. The latter made his money in oil. He was one of the organizers of the Salt Trust but got out of the combine before its troubles began. He got out with his money intact, too. He is a member of a big building syndicate, is a director in the Windsor Trust Company of New York and has been associated in business with Charles P. Taft, brother of the President, and likewise a resident of Cincinnati.

Mr. White, a lonely widower, was fascinated with the opera singer's charm. After a year's wooing he married her at her father's home in Minnesota. To please his bride he bought "Woodley," the Elbert F. Shepard estate at Scarborough-on-Hudson. Mrs. White became known as the "Woodley Beauty." The adoring millionaire also bought her a $250,000 pearl necklace.

When Mrs. White went to Paris last Spring she became a favorite in the musical and artistic set and was called the "Little Cavalieri," from her alleged resemblance to the diva.

TWO MAY DIE AFTER BATTLE IN MIDAIR

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 10.—Frank Hudson of Newburyport and Frank Watson may die following a desperate fight in which they struggled on a narrow platform forty feet in the air and then rolled off to a wharf below still clutching at each other's throats. They were picked up unconscious and taken to the Eastern Maine Hospital, hovering between life and death.

They were barrow men, spending cold upon a stage on the water front, where the horse Rex Garden was discharging. There appeared to be bad blood between the two, and the climax came when Watson was waiting in the turnout as Hudson came along with a loaded barrow. Witnesses say Watson shouted a name at Hudson, who deemed the barrow and rushed at Watson.

CARDINAL SETS SAIL TOMORROW

His Eminence William H. O'Connell, Cardinal-Archbishop of Boston, sails to-morrow at 2:30 on the Cunarder of the White Star line, on his way to Rome, where, at a consistory to be held on November 27, he will be formally invested with the crimson insignia of the cardinalate.

Cardinal O'Connell will be accompanied on his voyage by the following suite: The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Edward J. Moriarty of St. Peter's Church, Cambridge; the Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine, rector of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross; the Rt. Rev. J. E. Millerick, rector of St. Joseph's Church in the West End; the Rev. the Rt. P. J. Supple, rector of St. John's Church, Roxbury, and Fr. Joseph Coppinger, formerly of St. Joseph's Church, West End, now pastor of St. Aidan's Church in Brookline.

The parish of St. Aidan's in Brookline has sent the following cable to the Pope through Cardinal Merry del Val, the papal Secretary of State:

Cardinal Merry Del Val, Vatican, Rome:

The people of St. Aidan's parish, Brookline, wish you to convey hearty thanks to the holy father for the great honor he has bestowed on our beloved archbishop.

THOMAS A. MULLEN,
Secretary, Boston.

The Catholic Sailors' Club of Charlestown will hold open house to-morrow for the members of the Boston Catholic Alumni and other Catholic delegations, who will assemble as the guests of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Catholic Sailors' Club, to bid bon voyage to Cardinal O'Connell on his departure for Rome. Mrs. Francis Murphy, president, will be the hostess. The hall will be magnificently decorated for the occasion. On account of the pressure of time the Cardinal's visit to the club will be brief.

$175,000 VERDICT IN LAND DISPUTE

A verdict of $145,704.78, one of the largest land judgments secured in years, was returned in the Superior Court, before Judge Stevens, for the Fourth National Bank of Ala., against the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It was for the taking of thirty acres of land in Harvard street, Dorchester, for an addition to the Boston Insane Hospital. The plaintiffs claimed the land was worth from twelve to eighteen cents a foot. The verdict is at ten cents a foot.

SAGE TEA DARKENS THE HAIR, RESTORES COLOR TO FADED GRAY HAIR

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair, with wonderfully beneficial effect.

Nowadays we don't have to resort to old-time, tiresome methods of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

Don't neglect your hair. Get a bottle of Wyeth's sage and Sulphur to-day, and notice the difference after a few days' use.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

THIRD DEATH LAID TO WOMAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Jane Taylor Quinn is in a dingy cell in the Kensington Police Station openly accused of the death of two of her husbands and suspected of the death of a third.

The discovery that the woman had been married to a Michigan farmer named Thorpe, who was murdered in his home under circumstances dangerously parallel to those which attended the death of John Quinn of No. 210 South Michigan avenue, Saturday night, came after the woman had positively stated that she has been married but twice.

The climax of the inquest came when Charles Elmer Thorpe, of Jackson, Mich., went to the witness stand and openly accused Mrs. Quinn of the murder of his father. Mrs. Quinn had previously testified that her husbands had been John McDonald, a Canadian who died of alcohol poisoning, and Quinn, who was murdered in his Chicago home.

Son Accuses Woman.

It developed today that seventeen days after McDonald's death the woman married Thorpe. Thorpe was shot and instantly killed as he was dressing for church Sunday, July 15, 1903. Mrs. Thorpe was alone in the house with him at the time. She and her daughter, Pearl, were arrested and six weeks later were released for lack of evidence.

"Do you have any convictions as to who shot your father," Thorpe was asked.

"Yes, I believe she did," he replied, pointing to Mrs. Quinn. "She was alone in the house with him at the time."

It developed that on the day of his death Thorpe was to have driven to the home of his son to turn over to him a title to a 160-acre farm. His early death resulted in a division of his estate by which Mrs. Thorpe received $2,000 and $2,000 in life insurance.

An ink after ink was forged to the chain of testimony entangling Mrs. McDonald-Thorpe-Quinn, George F. Barrel began to lay the foundation for the impeachment of J. W. Miller, one of the startling witnesses, and made the startling statement that he would show that Miller fired the shot that killed Quinn.

Miller, who was a roomer at the Quinn home, swore that a few days before Quinn's death he missed a revolver and reported the fact to Mrs. Quinn.

"Oh, that's all right," he said she told him. "Don't say anything about it and I will pay you for the gun."

The Kensington Police Station was packed to the doors when the case was called. Mrs. Quinn appeared from her cell dressed in deep mourning. She quietly surveyed the scene before her and did not flinch when the most damaging testimony against her was offered.

FOSS TO OPEN CHURCH FAIR

"Governor's Night" will open the bazaar to be held in the school hall of the Sacred Heart Parish, East Boston, of which the Rev. James H. O'Neil is pastor, on Monday evening, November 20. The opening address will be made by Governor Foss. Tuesday evening will be "Mayor's Night" when Mayor Fitzgerald will address the audience. The remaining eight nights will be conducted under the auspices of the societies connected with the church. A large body of members of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, of which Father O'Neil is the state chaplain, will be present.

The proceeds will be used toward payment for the new convent, which will be opened during the month. It is of artistic design and planned for the accommodation of the sisters of the teaching corps of the parochial school, which is one of the largest in the diocese. One thousand children are under the direction of twenty teachers, ten of whom are lay teachers.

The buildings of the Sacred Heart Parish comprise one of the finest properties in the diocese, covering an entire block of one of the finest sections of the island district.

The six tables will be under the direction of the women of the parish. Special entertainment will be provided each evening to be followed by dancing.

The following executive committee has been elected: Richard C. Kirby, president; Thomas P. Green, secretary; the Rev. J. H. O'Neil, treasurer; the Rev. F. J. McCarthy, the Rev. John M. Burke, Ex-Representative D. J. O'Neil, James Lynch, James H. Donovan, John F. Callahan, Leo Sullivan, William J. BOUGHT HUSBAND AND WANTS TO KEEP HIM

COLORADO SPRINGS, Nov. 10.—"I bought him and paid for him, and I don't want to give him up," said Mrs. Margaretta Sullivan, wife of Dr. W. P. Sullivan, of Brooklyn, testifying in the latter's divorce suit. The Sullivans were married in New York in 1905. They separated soon afterward, but in 1906 were reunited in Jersey City. Mrs. Sullivan says she decided back to the doctor their Brooklyn residence, worth $10,000, to induce reconciliage. In his suit Dr. Sullivan alleges his wife had a past of which he was ignorant when he married her.

CHINESE WOMEN JOIN SUFFRAGISTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 10.—Mrs. Clara Elizabeth Lee and Mrs. Emma Tom Leong claim to be the first Chinese women in the history of the world to become entitled to vote. They were registered in Oakland by Deputy County Clerk W. B. Smith. Both are native born, Mrs. Lee in Oregon and Mrs. Leong in California. Mrs. Leong clings to the Chinese costume, and explained while giving the record that she made her a full-fledged citizen of the State, with a right to vote, that she does so out of deference to the wishes of her mother.

COSTS DOCTOR $1,000 TO CUT WRONG SIDE

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 10.—When Harris Berman went under ether in a Newark hospital some time ago he did so with the understanding that he was to be operated upon for an affection in his left side. When he came from under the influence of the ether he found the operation had been performed in his right side. The surgeon was Dr. Victor Pernoselle. Berman instituted suit, contending that the operation left an unnecessary scar and gave him great pain. He asked $10,000 damages, and a jury awarded him $1,000 after a trial lasting three days.

HEARST PRAISES FOSS ON VICTORY

Governor Foss was busy to-day answering the hundreds of congratulatory letters and telegrams on his victory of Tuesday. The first one he answered was the following telegram from William Randolph Hearst in New York:

Hearty congratulations on your splendid success. You have won the admiration of Democrats everywhere by your brilliant personal victory and their gratitude by your unselfish devotion to national Democratic principles. Among the congratulations received were the following:

Congressman McCullenlddy of Maine—Cordial congratulations upon Massachusetts' loyalty to a faithful public servant.

Congressman John Alden Thayer—Congratulations to Boston Herald's inevitable Foss. Worcester county helped. Delighted.

Governor Brewer of Mississippi—I congratulate you and the State of Massachusetts and the Democratic party of the State and nation on your re-election.

Congratulations by Hammond.

John Hays Hammond—Please accept my congratulations upon your re-election as governor.

W. J. McAdoo of New York—My hearty congratulations upon your wonderful victory and best wishes.

William Jennings Bryan—Accept hearty congratulations on Foss victory. We rejoice with you.

Lewis Nixon, New York—I congratulate you most heartily upon your great victory.

Governor Harmon—Warm regards, you would repeat. I felicitate you and Massachusetts, too.

Governor Hawley of Idaho—I have been watching the campaign in Massachusetts with the greatest interest, and your victory is the splendid personal tribute of the American people paid to the man of courage who upholds the right against any and all odds.

Congressman Jefferson H. Levy of New York—Accept for the Democratic party and yourself my congratulations upon your re-election for Governor.

Governor-elect Earl Brewer of Mississippi—I read with great delight and pleasure announcement of your re-election. I congratulate you and the State of Massachusetts and the Democratic party of the State and Nation on your election.

Mayor Higgins of Fall River—Congratulations on your splendid victory. Your re-election places Massachusetts in the position she belongs among the States. The people's cause has been fought and won and we can now look forward to 1912 as one of prosperity for Massachusetts.

F. S. Flower of New York—Congratulations again. Wish you many happy returns.

Hiigen Is Pleased.

Thomas S. Hiigen—Accept my hearty congratulations on your well-earned victory. May our State now take its place among many States which have declared for progressive legislation.

Daniel V. Doherty of Westfield—Congratulating the overwhelming advantage of our opponents, your victory is greater than that year. Westfield contributes its little share in an increased majority for you and Immediately did its best under the circumstances.

Eugene E. Reed, Democratic National Committeeman from New Hampshire—I desire to express my sincere congratulations upon your splendid victory over not only the Republicans of Massachusetts, but of the entire Nation. Every Democrat, wherever found, should be deeply indebted to you for your noble fight and extremely grateful at its successful termination.

SKIN TROUBLE TOOK HAIR OFF HER HEAD

Doctored and Used Several Remedies. Grew Worse Instead of Better. Husband Had Salt Rheum 23 Years. Both Happy Over Cures through Cuticura Treatment.

"I have suffered from birth with skin trouble, and doctored with four of the best doctors that could be found, without any lasting effects. Then I used several kinds of patent remedies, only growing worse instead of better. After using them a long time I was so bad that it took the hair off my head, and even my eye brows too, and made my eyes so bad that I was kept in a dark room for several weeks. I was out of my head for a long time. When a friend came to see me, she had been using some of the Cuticura Remedies, and she knew they would cure me, so I got some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Resolvent, and used them myself and he was cured. His flesh was covered with stuff like fish scales, especially in the winter, and he was bad in his hair so bad he had to keep his hair cut close to his head. It even grew down on his face, but we are now both cured of these terrible diseases, and are both happy over our cures through the use of the Cuticura treatment." (Signed) Mrs. Laurence Butler, Chesterfield, N. H., Jan. 10, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists everywhere, but a liberal sample of each with 32-p. book on skin troubles, will be sent free on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. TA, Boston.

CASE ONLY JOKE TO M'FARLAND

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Allison MacFarland, who will be placed on trial in January charged with the murder of his wife by cyanide of potassium, said to one of the guards to-day:

"That case against me is a joke—a real joke. Why should I worry, worry against such a fool thing as that? Why, there is not the shadow of truth in the absurd charge. Everything that they try to prove I can easily refute or show it in its true light."

SUFFRAGE WIFE AIDS NEW MAYOR

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—The suffragists of Philadelphia regard the election of Rudolph Blankenburg as Mayor as a festival in their cap, as Mrs. Blankenburg is a pioneer suffragist.

"Have a great opportunity," said Mrs. Blankenburg, "to put into practice our theories of reform and show what we consider righteous city government."

"Will you help your husband in his work?" Mrs. Blankenburg was asked.

"I will help him in any way I can. I know something of civic reform, for I have been interested in it for several years. Women are becoming more and more interested in public affairs and a great force in that way. It seems to me that if a little more of the spirit of the home could be brought into politics it would be a good thing for politics."

HOW TO DESTROY THE DANDRUFF GERM

BY A SPECIALIST.

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are, therefore, particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist states he has found, after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair growth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you: Six ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavoid de Compoase, one-half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly and after standing for hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the fingertips. Lavoid de Compoase, could not be obtained at the drug stores, would have to send to Parker, Stearns & Co., Detroit, Mich., for it. While this preparation is not a dye, it is unequaled for restoring gray hair to its original color.

CAUTION: Do not apply where hair is not desired and be sure to avoid tonics containing poisonous wood alcohol.

Before publication we procured this prescription at a prominent drug store in this city. We state that those have filled it state that they daily patrons, who report most astonishing results from its use.

CHILDREN BUY BANK INSURANCE

Encouraged by the reports of the financial officers and the praise heaped upon the organization by people in all walks of life, the members of the Women's Branch of the Massachusetts Savings Bank Life Insurance Association, of which Louis Brandeis is the founder, plan to strengthen and enlarge their scope of usefulness during the coming year.

Not only is the organization growing throughout the State, but it is likewise a potent factor in building up among the young a sentiment in favor of putting their spare cash in banks. Already the association has been successful in arresting the attention of hundreds of children throughout the State.

The youngest holder of a policy is Miss Margaret Alice Cole, who, if she lives to an old age will have a comfortable reserve fund.

Her parents took out an annuity policy for her when she was six months old, the annuity of $100 to begin when she reaches her sixtieth birthday. On this policy in payment of forty-one cents a month, or $4.92 a year, is made, and if you are quick at mental arithmetic you will be saying to yourself that that means an aggregate contribution of $295.20 covering the sixty years. This disregards the interest accumulation on the payments, because the Savings Insurance Bank will pay certain annual dividends on this policy. If the annuitant in question lives to go sixty-five she will have received back from the bank more than the entire amount of the payments made on account of this old age provision. But there is a chance that she comes of a long-lived family of her living to eighty years of age, and the bank is under contract to continue the payments so long as she shall live, and it has been scientifically demonstrated that the bank will be perfectly well able to do so.

Provision may also be made by paying $125 down and letting the interest accumulations, at 4 per cent, take care of the premiums. For a boy the cost of an annuity is somewhat less, for it has also been scientifically demonstrated that women after reaching the age of sixty live, on the average, longer than men.

As an evidence that Savings Bank Life Insurance meets a real need of the people, at the end of three years experience more than 5,000 policies are in force, representing nearly $2,000,000 of insurance. Of these 3,000 policies more than 70 per cent are held by women. Three banks have opened insurance departments and about 150 unpaid agencies have been established for the receipt of applications and the collection of premiums. These agencies are in mercantile establishments, in trade unions, in high schools, social settlements, etc. Under the auspices of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League an active campaign of education is being carried on by the sending of lecturers and instructors free of charge, to all parts of the State.

BIG FORTUNE TO FOOTBALL STAR

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 10.—Working hard daily on the gridiron with the squad of football men at Dartmouth, plugging to hold a regular position on the varsity eleven in order that he will win the much-coveted "D," is Nathaniel McClellan Whitmore, one of the richest students in the college.

Whitmore is a young giant and his stature and strength, with his football ability, have given him a regular place on the first team at a guard position. He weighs 198 pounds, is six feet three inches in height, and is twenty-one years old. This is his senior year at college and it is almost sure that he will make his "D."

Young Whitmore, who hails from Brunswick, Me., at all times at school his lived in luxurious quarters. He is a member of Kappa Kappa Kappa "frat," and is a friend of every man in college. Recently his uncle, after whom he is named, and who was a large owner in the Maine Central Railroad, died at Gardiner, Me., and left a large fortune. Much of this goes to Whitmore. The deceased is said to have been worth in the vicinity of $10,000,000, of which young Whitmore gets a good share.

The mother and father of the Dartmouth man have both passed away. They were residents of Brunswick, Me., and were well known there. The father was in the coal business in that town and left considerable property. Young Whitmore is the owner of the beautiful house in which Harriet Beecher Stowe lived and wrote her famous book, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." That house is a landmark in the town and young Whitmore is proud to preserve it. Previous to attending Dartmouth, Whitmore was a student at Mercersberg Academy in Pennsylvania and played football there. He has a brother who is a student at the Haverhill High School and who will, after graduating there, enter Dartmouth and also be a strong candidate for the varsity football device.

WHITMORE, RICH DARTMOUTH GUARD ON FOOTBALL TEAM

Nat H. Whitmore, unaffected by his falling heir to millions, keeps up his work to land college honors.

TECH CHEERING FOR 'PAPA' READY

"Papa" Ready is to-day the most popular man in the Junior class at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. At the 1913 class dinner last night in Tech Union one of the class men announced that William A. Ready of Nashville, Tenn., a member of the class, was the father of a bouncing baby girl.

Ready was showered with congratulations, as few of his classmates knew he was married. He was quietly wedded when on his Summer vacation last year. He and his wife are living in Boston.

The announcement was the big hit of the dinner. Prof. E. F. Miller and Prof. D. R. Dewey told of changes to be made in the college courses in engineering.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

VALUES VOTE AT $2,000 IN SUIT

Patrick Ford of Rockland raises his ballot at $2,000. He has sued Joseph F. Merrill, Harold Stetson and Edward Sexton, members of the board of registrars of Norwell, alleging they refused him the right to vote at the State primaries in September in the town of Norwell, where he claimed he was then a legal resident.

Ford's name was stricken from the voting list after he had moved from Norwell to Rockland. He appeared before the board at the time of registration after they had removed his name, but they refused to again put it on the list.

ASKS COURT TO BOSS HIS WIFE

Benjamin G. Bagley, who lived at No. 10 Comins terrace, Roxbury, has sought the aid of the court to compel his wife Marion to bring back a ton of coal which he alleges she moved to parts unknown. Bagley believes it's going to be a hard Winter and he not only asks for the black nuggets but also wants the parlor stove, a soup and butter knife bearing the initial B., a mattress, a pair of pillows, a refrigerator, and numerous other things which he says his wife took away. His plea for an injunction to compel her to return these things comes up on November 14.

SECOND RECITAL FOR STUDENTS

The advanced students of the Conservatory will give their second concert of the season in Jordan Hall to-night. Miss Gilma Pritchard of Taylor, Ky., a 1911 graduate, will sing three Franz songs, "Durch Sanselande Baume," "Wandlitch dem Wald das Abende" and "Frohlingsglaube."

Others participating will be Malcolm Sears of Mattapan, who will be heard at the organ in Bach's fantasie and fugue in G minor, and Miss Bessie Farnsworth in Liszt's polonaise in E minor for the piano.

There will be a violin selection by Percy Leveen of Somerville.

MRS. CRAIG BIDDLE, WHOSE CIGARETTE STARTLED SOCIETY

Wife of Philadelphia leader sets fashion for the Rittenhouse square set.

PUBLIC SMOKING BY MRS. BIDDLE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Since it became known that Mrs. Craig Biddle smoked a cigarette in the public restaurant of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel any woman in Philadelphia society who wishes to smoke a cigarette publicly will be regarded by the smart set as doing the proper thing.

For Mrs. Craig Biddle is a Biddle of the Biddles; her husband not only has the Biddle blood but he has money, which not all the Biddles have. Besides Mrs. Craig Biddle was a Whelen, Lotta Whelen, and if a female Whelen should please to smoke a cigarette in the middle of Rittenhouse square, Philadelphia society would smile indulgently—and follow the fashion probably.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle pass much time in Europe, and it is not unlikely that she learned to smoke cigarettes while associating with aristocratic and fashionable women there. She and her husband had luncheon in the Bellevue-Stratford's restaurant. When Mr. Biddle lighted a cigarette after luncheon his charming wife followed his example. From a gold case she drew a tiny roll of scented tobacco and paper, lit it, and, puffing it as nonchalantly as if she were a lobster, chatted with her husband. As the blue smoke curled from her delicate lips she presented a picture that even the well bred turned to see.

It will be observed that while Mrs. Craig Biddle smoked in public she was with her own husband. Nevertheless, the incident did not fill the hotel managers with joy.

"Many of our women guests object to women smoking in public here," said one of the assistant managers of the hotel. "So we have fitted up a room where women may smoke in private. It does seem as if women who must smoke would use that room and refrain from smoking in the public dining rooms."

TALKS COTTON WITH GOV. FOSS

Governor Foss, cotton spinner, and Governor-elect Earl Brewer of Mississippi, cotton producer, met to-day at the State House and for an hour were closeted in a "business conference."

Mr. Brewer when he came from the executive chamber said that politics had been discussed briefly and that he had told the Governor how excellent his chances were of becoming the vice-presidential nominee on the Democratic ticket, but that the meeting was principally to discuss a business matter.

Governor Foss as the head of the Maverick Cotton Mills of East Boston and Governor-elect Brewer as a big cotton producer admitted that their talk was on matters pertaining to the cotton business. It was the first visit of Mr. Brewer to the Massachusetts State House. He looked over all the historic treasures and was deeply interested.

Mr. Brewer is a typical Southerner and wore a broad-brimmed felt hat. He has the appearance of William Jennings Bryan with the exception that his hair is a silver gray. He made the appointment to meet Governor Foss a week ago and came here direct from Mississippi.

AUTO EXPLOSION INJURES TWO

Edward F. Baker, of No. 249 Newbury street, a prominent Harvard graduate, and Thomas P. Hurley narrowly escaped serious injury early today when the gasoline tank of Mr. Baker's automobile blew up on the Blue Hill boulevard at Ponkapog.

Baker is a brother of Walter P. Baker, whose marriage to Miss Jessica N. Peabody took place a few years ago. He is in the real estate business at No. 6 State street. He was on his way to the Newport game in Blue Hill when the explosion occurred. Baker was driving his car at a high rate of speed when the explosion occurred. Hurley was sitting beside him. Both men were thrown out of the machine, which was completely wrecked by the explosion.

WHEN A TONIC IS REQUIRED

Headaches, Backaches, Loss of Weight, Lack of Appetite, Energy and Ambition, Indicate the Need of a Blood Builder.

When the head aches down from overwork, one study, or any other cause, a good tonic is required.

But sometimes what is thought a simple debility is a severe case of a more serious disorder, as kidney trouble, breaking down of the nerves, etc. By taking a tonic that is recommended for many disorders of the blood, a person often times may avoid a more serious illness. So it is wise to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, for they are a blood builder and a perfect nerve tonic that has cured in many cases where other medicines had been tried without benefit.

The case of Mrs. Charles A. Joy, of Ellsworth Falls, Me., is one to prove the worthy tonic value of these pills as a cure for all run-down conditions. She says:

"I was sick for nearly a year, the doctors said I was run down and that my blood was in poor condition. I think the trouble was due to overwork. I felt tired out all the time. I could not have a very good appetite at what I did eat made me feel bloated and uncomfortable in the stomach. I grew more nervous each day and could not sleep. My hands would tremble, numb. I lost in flesh and felt very easy on myself.

"I was treated by physicians for several months but got no relief. Then I got my mother had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and had taken them. I began to take an appetite. I gained in flesh, have been quite well and strong, and I can say highly of them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have also cured in cases of nervous affections of the grip and fevers. A lady friend used with great success for the relief of nervous headache.

They can be had of all druggists, or will be sent prepaid on receipt of 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," containing more information will be sent free upon request.

BUNKER HILL FIVE IN FIELD

The Bunker Hill team of Charlestown is again to be represented in the floor this season by a fast five. All former stars on the team will line up for the coming season. Dalzell Fitzpatrick, who will manage the five, is after the strongest team in the state.

Fife, the former Dean Academy star, and Kelley of Springfield will take care of the forward positions. Fife is one of the cleverest players in the State and he is doing an accurate shooting he is a comparatively new player. McLaughlin of Williamsburg plays center. In the backfield will be Murphy, formerly of the Franklins, Fife, Jefferson, of the championship Charlestown High and Tommy Elder of Dean Academy. Jefferson is noted for his long shooting ability, besides being the star on the defense.

Games are wanted with the St. Mary's Cadets, the Arena Club, Eagle Field, Bay State, Notre Dame, Warren Highlands, Penn Five, Old Town Club of Medford, Lawrence High and many others. Manager Fife can be reached at Hyde Park, and Captain Kelley at Springfield.

Members of the Sixth Regiment, on the north side, Hyde Entrance, are in the market for games with fast five-man teams. Father Gets Lectured on the Matter of Looks as Bait

When a woman tries to [illegible] makes up her audience as if he were two men or a host like a whole family from that Lysander John Algernon knows the nature of what is coming. He tries to put flesh on all his flesh left, with that. If [illegible] between he and [illegible] he anticipates we are starving for [illegible] and [illegible] at the [illegible] he [illegible] the first rain—the sensation of man.

He and his brothers think because [illegible] under a woman with a face that looks like a map of an undersea [illegible] and thinking unless the [illegible] of the country is inhabited, [illegible] enough life during ourselves that [illegible] and when [illegible] and what do you think give up [illegible]

It was John thought and thought, [illegible] his head, but couldn't [illegible] answer.

"Do you enjoy when you are busy in [illegible] and you get all out of hair or your [illegible] and you come to us with unshaved [illegible] your face and try hair on your [illegible] and a rolling up [illegible] form that would make a naught front [illegible] with despair, and demand [illegible] we admire you. And to any dying [illegible] I confess [illegible] we do.

PART I.—(Continued).

THIS time the president forebore to [illegible] his eyes followed [illegible] right hand, which [illegible] the cords tying the knapsack. When it was flushed, the president [illegible] Lieutenant and brought forth a [illegible] of white linen.

Then the delegates seated themselves [illegible] and absolute stillness [illegible] great event.

The president's every move was followed by each one. Standing almost [illegible] M. White unfolded the linen. The sight of the red letters recalled that other [illegible] in Latin which a fisherman had found fastened to a buoy in San Francisco Bay.

It was a moment for great emotions. Before the delegates [illegible] their hearts [illegible] and each one's eyes riveted to the white canvas [illegible]

Above the president stood, most terribly [illegible] holding in his hands the dazzling white piece of cloth.

One could have heard a pin drop in the great amphitheatre.

Suddenly a cry burst from the left end of the room, a choking cry yet hard and imperious:

"Attend it!"

From the Unknown

M. White suffered himself, and [illegible] [illegible] and, to [illegible] terribly perturbed [illegible] read:

To the World Congress

Gentlemen—I would like to talk before a meeting of the Congress

Forty votes by an [illegible] that no one will make an attempt to deprive [illegible] my liberty, no matter what means [illegible] to employ.

If [illegible] of your assurance, I am [illegible] the least indignity, if my [illegible] [illegible] from me for as long as [illegible] on board, as the vessels afloat will be destroyed within a fortnight.

A fine [illegible] above the lighthouses of Palais will not fly one of your devices [illegible] I give notice to hear me, while I [illegible] your friendship offer me a compromise of good faith.

In this latter case I will go board a torpedo boat which you may send [illegible] around the lighthouse. I shall wait until to-morrow noon.

(Signed) "THE UNKNOWN."

After speaking the name which was terrifying the world, M. White lowered his arms and looked at the assemblage.

It was as though an electric shock had run through the company. They rose and began to cry out:

"The Unknown! The Unknown! Let him come here! We will hear him! He can come safely!"

Then, astounded in an indescribable uproar, and from time to time they bleeded [illegible] name above:

"The Unknown! The Unknown!"

The president called for silence with a wide sweep of the arms.

He was given instant obedience because the assemblage guessed that he had portentous things to relate. He collected himself for an instant, then said in a loud voice:

"Gentlemen, in the name of all the nations which you here represent, I will decide that the Unknown may come to us and that each one here will personally guarantee his safety.

The white flag will fly over the Pharos lighthouse.

A torpedo boat will [illegible] him back to [illegible] sea. We will delegate Admiral Germinet to carry out these plans and we will make him responsible for the Unknown's safe conduct to and from his room.

"We Agree"

"Admiral Germinet, who is present, will please confer with M. le Maire, the Mayor, Monsieur the Prefect and Monsieur the Governor-General of Marseilles in whatever matters concern the public safety.

"In the meantime the [illegible] will await the Unknown. Gentlemen, do you agree with my proposals?"

"We agree!" cried the delegates with one accord.

"All right, Germinet," went on M. White, turning toward the space occupied by the general officers. "Do you accept the commission and its responsibilities?"

"I do, Admiral Germinet, please carry it out at once."

In the company of M. de Clesrat and his staff, Admiral Germinet left the platform and left hall, followed by cheers from the delegates.

A quarter of an hour later, while the [illegible] the perfect and the governor general were mobilizing the police and the troops, Admiral Germinet embarked on the [illegible] with M. de Clesrat. Elaisa [illegible] Claire received them, and De [illegible] at once gave took command of his [illegible]

The Cyclone left the ancient port at full speed, passed the Island of If, and sailed to leeward toward Plaster Light.

First Mate Mathieu disembarked here and hoisted the white flag with the Lighthouse keeper's assistance.

He returned on board at once and the Cyclone steamed slowly around within the paths of a mile.

The admiral and de Clesrat remained on the afterdeck. Ensign Sainte Claire watched the manoeuvres, and each man was at his post. Each heart was beating furiously with expectancy, and under his inscrutable mask and his stern bearing, Admiral Germinet was no less impatient than the humblest sailor.

It lacked two minutes to 6 o'clock by De Clesrat's watch when the admiral saw first, two cable lengths to starboard, a violent bubbling of the calm sea.

"Stop," he cried.

And the Cyclone stopped almost at once.

At the right of the torpedo boat there appeared a human form with silver scales all shining in the sun. The man's head was covered by a glass mask. With a bound he was upon the torpedo's deck, standing before the stupefied men.

He drew back his mask at once and the admiral could not restrain an exclamation of surprise as he beheld the young Apollo's face. Could this child be the Unknown, who had made the whole world tremble?

Hictaner said plainly.

"Gentlemen, I am the Unknown, or rather his brother, his twin. His double. You come in the name of the Congress?

"Yes," answered the Admiral, barely recovered from his surprise and his emotion.

"I am glad I intrust my person to your safe keeping. With whom have I the honor of speaking?"

The Admiral drew himself up and called forth all his self possession.

"I am Admiral Germinet, in command of the allied fleets of the Mediterranean. This is Lieutenant de Clesrat, first mate of the torpedo boat, and this is Ensign Sainte Claire, his second officer. These men are part of the crew."

And Admiral Germinet, the Admiral, am called Hictaner. Will you be so good as to conform to the Congress? I will not say more to you."

"Hictaner" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A general installment of this remarkable mystery novel will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

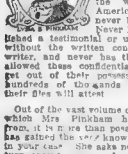
FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman, and thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.



Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

CURSES! CLAUDE IS RESCUED BY THE FLEET AND IS FIGHTING ON THE ITALIAN SIDE I'LL STAY WITH THE TURKS AND FIGHT TO DEATH
HEARSTFELD

With his captives, Claude Eclaire and the beautiful Rosamond, Desmond lands at last on Turkish soil. Among the subjects of the Sultan the villain knows that he will find congenial spirits, and that he will find plenty of aid in ending the life of Claude. Villains are villains, whatever flag they may be under.

And Desmond guessed right. Willing hands among the Turkish soldiery aid the villain in putting the helpless Claude inside a torpedo which is to be fired at an Italian battleship then blockading the coast, in an effort to bring civilization to these benighted people living in the shadow of the Crescent.

Shooting through the water at terrific speed, with his undefended head pointed straight for the steel sides of a warship, Claude is indeed in a terrible predicament. Not possessing the proper number, the man who lived under water, Claude must devise if he is not killed by striking the ship.

A sudden explosion aboard the Italian battleship occurs just as Claude in the torpedo is about to smash against its sides. Explosions of powder are one of the dangers to which the gallant Italian sailors, like those of other nations, are subjected, and their stout ship begins to sink.

Explosions as a rule do not help anybody, but this one was a lucky thing for Claude Eclaire, imprisoned in his torpedo. A porthole comes in front of him, just as he is striking the side of the ship, and his head—and what a valuable head it is—is saved from being crushed.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "but I'm baffled this time." Claude has been picked up by an Italian rescue party and is now aboard one of the battleships. Desmond Pasha is on the side of the Turks, and he knows that eventually his cause is doomed. But look for doings tomorrow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

GIVE HIM HIS CHOICE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a man who intends to go on the stage. He professes to be in love with me, and although not engaged, has led me to believe there is an understanding. We have been going together three years and we agree on all matters except this.

How can I dissuade him?

ELIZABETH.

I WOULD explain that if he became an actor it would be impossible to marry him. Tell him you would rather leave him than interfere with his career. If he succeeds you he will change his mind. Otherwise you are better off without him.

WORK IS YOUR SALVATION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a young man of eighteen and in love with a cultured young girl of a very rich family. We love each other, and she wants to be married. I would like to, but I am a poor boy with no education.

I feel that I ought to give her up. She said if I marry her she will see that I get a good position working for her father, but I fear that her father hasn't any use for me.

ANXIOUS BOY.

I ADMIRE your feelings and I know you are worthy of the young girl in question. Ask her if she loves you well enough to wait until you have made a place for yourself.

Win her parents' respect and admiration before attempting to ask for their consent to your marriage. They will then appreciate you and feel that you are deserving.

How can I dissuade him?

ELIZABETH.

ARE YOU FAT—

Or thin, homely, careless, blonde, brunette or muddy? There is hope.

PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS, FACIAL ERUPTIONS

All Disappear When Gettysburg Man Uses Resinol

How happy would men and women be did they know, as does R. G. Parry, of Gettysburg, Pa., how to remove blackheads and pimples and restore their skin to its natural healthy state! Today a beautiful woman is rendered homely by facial eruptions. This letter may be the means of showing a way to those thus afflicted. Read it thoroughly and give it thought.

"For some months my face was covered with pimples and blackheads. Hearing of Resinol Soap, I immediately began to use it, and was greatly benefited, especially so in its having caused the disappearance of all facial eruptions.

"R. G. PARRY.

"Gettysburg, Pa."

Resinol Soap quickly relieves and removes skin affections and Resinol Ointment is without a rival in relieving eczema, scalds, burns, tetter, milk crust, ringworm, barber's itch, pimples, rash, itching, blackheads, boils, chilblains, chaps and cracking of the skin, etc. Your druggist is familiar with the efficacy of Resinol Ointment, and will sell it to you in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, or, if free trial is desired, write for sample to Department 9S, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

On Laziness

DR. CHARLES A. EATON said in the course of an after-dinner speech in Cleveland:

"Laziness is responsible for too much of the misery we see about us. It is all very well to blame alcohol for this misery, to blame oppression and injustice, but to what heights might we not all have climbed but for our laziness?"

He paused and smiled.

"We are too much like the supernumerary in the drama," he went on, "who had to enter from the right and say, 'My lord, the carriage waits.'

"Look here, super," said the stage manager one night, 'I want you to come on from the left instead of the right after this, and I want you to reinforce your speech. Make it run hereafter, "The carriage waits, my lord."'

"The super pressed his hand to his brow.

"More study! More study!' he groaned."

HE DID A GREAT TRADE

"This collar stud is my own invention," said the street hawker, "and the name I have given it is 'Panic.'

"Because everybody has faults?" suggested a man in the crowd.

"No, my dear sir, simply because it's so easy to find."

AS she said, she was tired. A new inexplicable slothfulness was creeping over mind and body. Once when Andrew Grieve, the elderly Scotsman, who was acting as courier to the party, called a halt, came up to the side of the hammock and spoke to her, she opened her eyes for a moment, but did not arouse herself to speak to him or appear to heed what he said.

With the shake of the head, the Scot ordered the march to be resumed; and the party swung on through the forest as though a spell of silence had been laid upon it. Not a sound to break the thread of thought, however subtle and delicate, only the occasional creak of the hammock, the thud of the naked feet.

But to Andrew Grieve, who knew the forest as a child knows a mother, who dreaded it as a sensitive child might dread a secretive, sinister stepmother, the silence spoke with an eloquence more vivid, more overmastering than any words.

For to Andrew Grieve it was a belief as firmly rooted as distant Ben Nevis himself that when the forest held her breath the forest was crouching to spring.

More than once as the hours passed and the miles slipped by them did he glance anxiously toward the hammock where the white woman lay in that strange state of semi-somnolence that had descended so suddenly upon her.

The memory of words rang in Clemency's brain as her hammock men bore her rapidly beyond sight of the bungalow toward the great wall of the forest.

"Forget Africa and all that Africa holds —the living and the dead." And for the first time, as she lay there lulled by the curious rhythm of the motion, the girl found it in her heart to pray that she could forget—not those few golden months when love had come into her life and unlatched the gate of Paradise land, but all of her life that concerned John Martindale since that night when she had fought against his passion and her own in the moonshot twilight of the cloisters of Rosescot.

"I said good-by to him then," she said to herself, with a little sobbing intake of the breath. "I gave him back to you then, O God, the man you gave. I am tired—so dreadfully tired."

Forest a Leveler

They had entered the forest now. The glare of the sun, already powerful, early as it was, was shut out suddenly. Clemency was hardly conscious of the change, or that her bearers' speed had diminished to the steady jog-trot that would be kept up for some hours now.

The shade of anxiety had deepened in Andrew Grieve's eyes that night when the camp had been pitched in the rough clearing of the forest.

All about them on every side rose up the tall, smooth boles of the trees; to the right, where the undergrowth had thriven ill, or been cleared by some rough means, there were traces that at some time a native village had stood there; the ruins of the mean huts were visible here and there, but the green hands of the forest were busy covering them up.

Clemency, who seemed to have slept off some of the languor that had possessed her in the earlier part of the day, saluted the men's moodiness as they sat at supper outside her tent in the red glow of the camp fire. The forest is a great leveler of social inequalities. Clemency found herself incredibly glad of the company of this rough-handed man, who ate as one who has eaten with his food, and whose rasping voice, as she had reason to know, could command the fullest flow of invective that even West African bush boys had quailed before.

"Has anything gone wrong, Andrew?" she asked.

"Wrong! for why do you ask?" he said, after a pause. He cut through a hunch of bread held at a perilous angle between forefinger and thumb, with a murderous-looking, black-hafted knife.

Clemency smiled.

"When look dour, isn't that the word?" she said. "I think I grew to read your looks on our journey up. Has the cook been raiding the chophot, or what?"

Eyes on the Fire

"Well," he said, hesitatingly, "I'm no so pleased—that's sure enough. I'm no so pleased wi' the bunch o' blacks we've picked up this journey. I didna' care for them on the march up, but I'm more than out o' love wi' them now. Their hearts are blacker than their physiognomies, an' that's sayin' all!"

He drifted away from her with a rough good-night, but Clemency did not feel disposed to follow his advice and go to bed. She sat outside her tent in the darkness, her eyes on the red circle of fire, and watched the carriers settling up the camp for the night. The languor of the morning was returning to her; even Grieve's words seemed to have slipped past her without the power to disturb her or ruffle her. But, at last, half afraid that she might fall asleep as she sat there, she went into the tent, threw herself on her bed, and fell into a deep sleep.

It seemed to her that she had slept hours when she woke again with a sudden start. But it was still quite dark, and the sounds that came to her distinctly from the forest told her it was still far from dawn.

She lay listening to them drowsily; then presently she started up, wide awake, and called out sharply. Some one was moving in the tent.

At Clemency's cry of alarm the sound ceased abruptly; but as her ears became accustomed to the succeeding silence, she could hear distinctly the heavy, suppressed breathing as of some large animal. Some where near her within the tent.

The strange occupant screamed again, a long, thin scream of panic fear, that pierced through the mists of sleep that clung about Andrew Grieve's brain and brought him back from pleasant dreams of the little house in Glasgow.

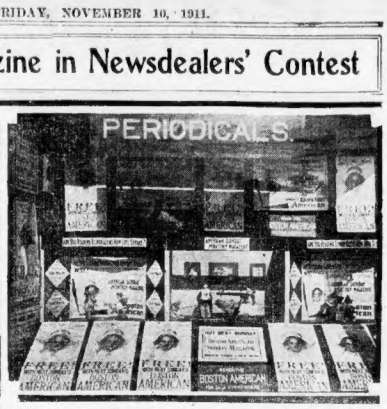
Five Prize Winning Window Displays of the Sunday American Magazine in Newsdealers' Contest

L. A... won the third prize of $5.

G. M. Heslett's display at No. 21 Central square, Cambridge, second prize of $10.



The AMERICAN announces today the names of the winners in the second contest for prizes offered newsdealers in the Metropolitan district for the best front window display of the Sunday AMERICAN magazine. This second contest was even more interesting than the first one, developing more competitors and new elements of display.

First prize, $25, won by H. Hirshon, North Ferry, Boston.

Second prize, $10, won by G. M. Heslett, No. 21 Central square, Cambridge.

Third prize, $5, won by L. H. Steele, No. 11 College avenue, West Somerville.

Fourth prize, $2, won by Nell H. Cronin, No. 906 Fourth street, South Boston.

Fifth prize, $2, won by Burroughs Bros., No. 781 Tremont street, Boston.

Sixth prize, $2, won by L. Norton Wells, No. 339 Talbot avenue, Dorchester.

Seventh prize, $2, won by Stewart & Salisbury, corner Chelsea and Prospect streets, Charlestown.

Eighth prize, $2, won by J. Lynch, No. 1292 Tremont street, Roxbury.

Sixty Dealers Competed.

Forty newsdealers in the Metropolitan district competed in the first contest. The present one brought out sixty competitors. Edward J. Driscoll, of the Driscoll News Agency, at West Everett, was judge of displays. Mr. Driscoll brought his best judgment to bear upon the competition, but found it by no easy task to decide.

H. Hirshon, of the North Ferry news stand, to whom the big prize of $25 is awarded, worked along the line of artistic display alone and scored notable success.

G. M. Heslett of Cambridge, winner of the second prize, worked along the line of ingenuity, making an extremely clever display.

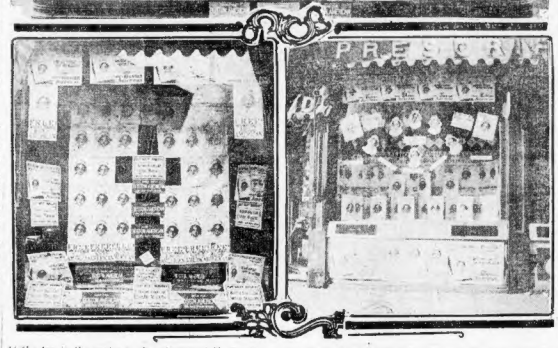
Mr. Hirshon used all his front window space to advantage to show the cover front of the November number of the Sunday AMERICAN magazine, with its beautiful picture of "The Autumn Girl," by Philo Bedient. He produced a striking effect, set in a big frame, with "The Autumn Girl" gazing at spectators from every angle. The whole was well designed, combining artistic possibilities with actual display, so that the window front was most pleasing to the eye.

Moving Models in Window.

Mr. Heslett framed his window with cover fronts and in the window space proper staged three miniature scenes featuring the Sunday AMERICAN magazine. The middle one had working or moving needles, representing a happy family. The husband reads the Sunday AMERICAN magazine, serving the magazine accidentally, as though to tell his wife some interesting feature. The wife dances the baby on her knee and gazes back at her husband.

The side models represent a group of nurse tending the nursing on one side and a newsboy approaching a prospective customer on the other.

All newsdealers in New England are discussing these window contests with interest, just as the entire New England public is reading the Sunday AMERICAN magazine with avidity. The magazine is simply a case of all good things combined worth or finely illustrated reading matter given free with the Sunday AMERICAN. From artistic, literary and mechanical standpoints the Sunday AMERICAN magazine is the leader.



At the top in the centre is the window of H. Hirshon, at the North Ferry; first prize $25. At the left below is the display of Nell H. Cronin, No. 906 Fourth street, South Boston, which won the fourth prize, $2. At the right is the window of Burroughs Brothers, No. 781 Tremont street, which took fifth prize, $2.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Strong bull support of the market coupled with a buying movement precipitated by the action of the Commerce Court in granting an injunction suspending the federal order for a 5c rate raise in the West caused the stock market to open with an upward rush. Those who ascribe buying of many of the leading railroad shares, and pulp and paper issues a point more made in the first fifteen minutes of the session to the 4 1/4 per cent. of 2½ over last night's close.

Lots of odd pelts, a much wider demand for Crown, Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Union and Southern Pacific.

Brokers who are said to act for the Morgan group were active traders and they bought liberally.

The buoyant tide did not maintain the show of strength which characterized it at the opening. United States Steel common was in higher at the opening, but subsequently lost ½. Copper was up ¼; Pennsylvania Railroad showed a gain of ¼.

Governor Foss Has Blazed the Way for Clean Politics

It is doubtful if many citizens in this State appreciate one deeply significant feature of the election. It was an important campaign. The Republicans understood its critical influence upon the coming National election. They chose the most favorable ground on which to wage the contest. They selected the issues. They had power to select the candidate who fitted those issues best, and they had a campaign fund which was large enough to support the utmost efforts of the party.

No situation could give the Democratic party greater excuse to fight fire with fire and to meet what are considered legitimate expenses of a political campaign than this situation, in which the Republicans were applying every resource within their possession and under the most favorable circumstances for employing those resources.

But Governor Foss had signed a new corrupt practice act which limited the amount of money that the Governor could spend to promote his own election. This law is loosely drawn and does not prohibit the Governor from contributing indirectly any amount of money to promote his own election.

But Governor Foss signed the bill because he believed that a beginning must be made in the limitation of these great campaign expenses. He wanted to see the Democratic party so completely relieved from the necessity of spending large sums of money in elections that it may not feel obliged to go every year in the quest of "angels" as candidates, who would supply it with campaign funds in exchange for the honor of a nomination.

Governor Foss insisted upon the observance of the new law, both in letter and spirit. Therefore, the extraordinary spectacle was witnessed of a great party going to the polls after a fierce and critical contest, without spending one dollar that was contributed from the political headquarters to bring out the vote.

It was a brave and a venturesome experiment. As a beginning of a changed order of things in Massachusetts politics, it was an important decision by the Governor. He risked his election, but he obeyed the real intent of the law, and the whole Democratic party is now in a position to insist that the law shall be made effective by prohibiting the spending of money either directly or indirectly to bring out the vote, except in cases where the voter is ill or infirm, in which cases the State shall assume the expense.

Few reforms will accomplish more to increase the people's control of their government than a reform of our election laws, by prohibiting those unnecessary practices to obtain votes which cost money and require a large campaign fund.

To-day it has become a little too dangerous, and, happily, also quite vulgar, to bribe a legislator. The corporations secure their control of legislation now by contributing to the campaign fund of the candidates. Election expense, therefore, increases the power of the corporations because it increases the necessity for campaign funds.

The Democratic party ought not to be obliged to abstain from those expenses and put itself at a disadvantage with its opponents, who will not abstain from them. The law should oblige both parties to abstain.

It cannot be doubted that the Republicans will see the fairness of perfecting the new corrupt practice act so that both parties may stand upon an equal footing.

The loss of the gallant and chivalrous Walsh by the obedience which the party gave to the letter and spirit of the law was a great sacrifice to political principle and one the Democrats ought not again to be called upon to make.

It is as much the duty of every citizen to vote as it is to pay his taxes. A citizen's neglect of civic duty should not be the cause of such election expense as increases the power of those who seek special privileges and favored legislation, and who are willing to contribute to the campaign fund a small part of what they make out of the public from the special privilege they enjoy.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

WHERE TO LIVE

Editor AMERICAN:

I read with interest your many instructive and interesting articles, and wish if you find the inclosed of interest you would print it.

Where are the poor people going to live, in a respectable neighborhood, and bring their children up in a respectable atmosphere? I have made it a business to go around to the different sections of the city for the main purpose of ascertaining just where one could live on a moderate income. I find that unless a man can pay at the very least $80 a week it is an impossibility to locate in a decent neighborhood.

There is so much information from different sources as to how the mother should bring up her children, and what she shall read them to make them healthy, but there is never a word about lowering of rent so that a mother may bring up her children in a clean location and among clean companions. What can be expected of the child who is obliged to play around the door of a saloon after he has left school in the afternoon? Perhaps the parents of this child have had a very good home in their childhood, perhaps the mother has to go to work and leave her little boy to the mercy of some neighbor till her return at six at night. I know of more than one case like this.

Placed in the right conditions this child has as good a chance as any, but in an environment such as I have just mentioned he or she stands little chance. Give any one good surroundings and see what changes you have. There is all kinds of money left to colleges and institutions, but never any to build homes for the working man. Why doesn't somebody build a block and rent them at a moderate rent. It seems to me this would be about as charitable an act as any one could do.

JEFF PEYTON.

THE PEOPLE ARE THINKING

Editor AMERICAN:

A wonderful victory when we come to consider the opposition to Governor Foss.

It shows that the people are doing their own thinking, and that Massachusetts is a progressive State.

Now let's go ahead. It seems like in the days of Lincoln, the man.

If the Republican party hopes to regain hold, it must stand first of all upon a platform that means something more than just standing pat.

Massachusetts is not of that kind, she is looking ahead, as she did in the days of the Revolution, for better conditions.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

THE PROPER WAY TO SAVE

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

A little money put away every week may, in the long run, make all the difference there is between poverty and comfort. An actual instance of this is worth more than a whole column of theory. The case of which I am thinking is that of a man who is seventy-two years old.

Down to about twenty-five years ago he spent his earnings as fast as he made them. His business was a prosperous one, and yielded him good returns. He kept no expense account, and at the year's end all that he could say of the profits of his business was that they had disappeared beyond recovery.

He was a moderate drinker, and carelessly sailated this and other of his wants without stopping to calculate how many dollars it took to do it.

A quarter of a century ago an old friend met him and said to him:

"Are you laying aside anything for a rainy day?"

"No," was his reply. "I have not more than a hundred dollars to my name."

His friend expostulated with him on the foolishness of his spendthrift habits and reminded him that not a great many years would pass before his money-earning power would be gone, and asked him how he expected he would then be taken care of.

The timely sermon produced more effect than can be credited to most preaching, and his life broke in two at that point.

Was $900 to the Good at End of First Year

He at once commenced guarding his expenditures, and so reduced his extravagance as to create a credit balance between income and outgo, and had $900 to the good at the end of the first year.

This balance he applied toward the purchase of a house, giving a mortgage for the remainder.

Soon the mortgage was paid off, and the restless spendthrift had blossomed out into a property-holder.

He has now reached the age when he is not able to do as much business as formerly, but he is provided for. When he dies, as he will, one of these days, his body will not go to the potter's field, nor his last days be made comfortable through the generosity of others. The admonition of his friend did the work.

An honest word of advice kindly spoken goes a long way sometimes. Calm blundered badly when he doubted whether he was his brother's keeper.

We certainly are our brother's keeper. And we can sometimes do a great deal toward keeping him if we go about it right.

But the lesson in economy that one man learned not only procured him the means of comfort, but resulted in cutting off those foolish and harmful indulgences that would likely have resulted eventually in his physical and moral ruination.

There is saving grace in a bank balance. To own something and to be trying to own more is one means of helping a man to keep the Ten Commandments.

The Question of Women Smoking in Public

The objection recently made to allowing women to smoke in public places has drawn upon it the criticism of some of the lady readers of the AMERICAN.

The remark may be ventured that smoking anywhere by anybody, man or woman, is not a particularly elegant accomplishment.

Some of us would no more have expected to see our father smoke than we should to hear him swear; and to have detected our mother filling a pipe or twisting a cigarette would have suggested the wisdom of having her removed to a retreat for the helplessly insane.

To say that one sex has as much right to smoke as the other does not cover quite the entire ground. Assuming that smoking is not an extremely refined habit even in a man, we are nevertheless prepared quite cordially to put up with behavior in a man that we should only reluctantly tolerate in a woman; and on the very sufficient and complimentary ground that there is a reverence in our regard for her sex that we do not have for our own.

There are females that ridicule that distinction, and for the reason that the male element in their composition precludes their ability to appreciate it.

But in the manly mind the distinction exists, and with whatever disappointment we may sometimes be obliged to regard certain of our flippant and cocky sisters the distinction will survive in us so long as we continue to be gentlemen and cherish the remembrance of our mother and sisters.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About What's Deadly

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WELL, sed Pa last nite, was he was reading the paper, wall, wife, what do you think of this, I wud like to know?

Wat is it? sed Ma.

This poem of Mister Kipling's, said Pa, about the men & the ladies. Look at it, sed Pa, look at it & agree with me that Mister Kipling is the greatest singer since the days of Byron and Shelly. Look at it, I ask.

What in the world are you gilling so excited about, sed Ma, let me see this wunderful poem. I will recite it to you, sed Pa, at least the first verse. It says:

Wen the Himmalyan peasant sees a
he-bear in his pride,
His shout will often chase that bear
along the mounting side.
But the she-bear, thus accosted, rends
the peasant tooth and nail,
For the female of the species is dedlier than the male.

Didn't I always say the same to you, sed Pa & dident I always say that Mister Kipling was a grate poet. I felt so good wen I read this, sed Pa, that I rote two verses like it cumming up on the elevated. Here they are, said Pa:

Wen the men that work like blazes
from the morning till the nite,
Git on the home bound stress car, they are apt to lose their nite,
Because the ladies hatpins are sharper than a nail—
The female of the species is dedlier than the male.

I knew an honest farmer once, won I was but a boy;
He drank too much hard cider & cain
barm with too much joy.
His wife she was scalding in the door & hit him with a flail.
The female of the species is dedlier than the male.

What wonderful intellect you have, sed Ma, to be sure. It seems strange that a man with pure branes cuddent cash them in for a sou. The trubbil with pure poetry, sed Ma, is that you rite it in the tunnel & then it goes into the cellar. Why dount you try politics, or something fast wunns redy munny? You was nervye out out to earn yure living with a pen or a tipewriter, maybe, in sum business house.

I dount give up that easy, sed Pa, I am a pasyant man. I recitee that sum of these fine days I am going to mark a great hit in literater, & wotl that time cums I shall never give up trying. The female of the species may be dedlier than the male, Pa sed, but it takes a man to be game & refuses to quit.

Yes, yes, sed Ma, I know. It taks a man to be game, dow it, and refuse to quit? My dere husband, sed Ma, the only time that a man refuses to quit is wen sumbody says to him, Dount you think you have enuff for one nite? Dount you think you ought to go hom? That is the only time he has the currage to say No, sed Ma. As for that poetry of yures, Ma sed, I can mak up two verses rite now without using a pen or paiper, just as good as yure verses. Listen, sed Mat

When a man has worked like blazes
from the morning till the nite
& then has played at bilyards till the hour of twelve with Pa,
No wunder that his wife at hoam can mait him shake and quail—
The female of the species is gamer than the male.

That is enuff, that will do, sed Pa. I dount care to hear the next verse.
